Ag Progress Tuesday Through Thursday

Survey To Look At Dairying Into The Next Century

Ag Progress Days will focus on Pennsylvania's food system from farm to table. The event is held at Penn State's Russell E. Larson Ag Research Farm at Rockspring, Tuesday, Aug. 13 to Thursday, Aug. 15.

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — As a dairy farmer in the next century, what approach will you take to dairying?

What will you have to do to keep the farm viable and profitable?

What challenges will you have to face? Ultimately, what changes will you have to make now to meet the demands of a new marketplace?

Visitors to this year's Ag Progress Days in Rockspring will have a chance to take a look into their own operation and see where they may be headed as part of a special Penn State survey.

The survey will ask questions to determine where you want to be as a dairy farmer in the next century. According to Mike O'Connor, Penn State extension coordinator, dairy and animal science, the survey will be done as a trial run with approximately 300 herd managers at this year's Ag Progress Days.

"The survey is being prepared as part of new educational initiatives at Penn State to help farmers face the challenges beyond the year 2000," said O'Connor.

Answers to the survey will help guide a 20-member oversight committee, composed of extension educators and industry representatives, into formulating the subjects of dairy seminars in the years to come.

In addition, the survey itself will act as a "yardstick" for a dairy manager to determine where his or her business will be in the next 10 years, according to Clyde Myers, Berks County extension agent

Extension educators will help administer the dairy survey to dairy families beginning next Tuesday at this year's Ag Progress Days. The survey will be handed

Ag Progress Days Provides Public Opportunity To Learn

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 1996 Ag Progress Days has the theme, "Penn State Ag Sciences ... We're more than you think!"

Themes are thought up by people with the intention of creating in the minds of the public an attractive preconcept of an event.

Ag Progress Days probably doesn't need a theme.

There's more going on than can probably be absorbed in a day's visit, especially for those with specific interests who desire to ask questions and pursue a better understanding of where research efforts are being focused within a specific discipline.

The Russell E. Larson Agricultural Center at Rockspring, near State College turns into a small town of demonstration areas, tents of displays, horse demonstrations and instruction, tractor driving, field work, computers, plant varieties, insect controls, manure and nutrient management techniques, forestry, conservation.

Commercial exhibitors set up their latest examples of equipment and machinery, and different agricultural support groups ofter educational materials.

There's places to ask the experts specific questions. There's the annual hay contest which serves as a pre-entry for the state Farm Show in January.

Restroom facilities are numerous and well placed. Parking is plentiful in the large fields.

Families come for the day and a frequent sight is parents with a reg wagon in tow, carrying their young children through the "streets" of the demonstration town.

Tour busses with knowledgable guides offer free trips to different areas throughout the acres of research plots that extend on both sides of Rt. 45, from Rockspring toward Boalsburg.

This year, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center has planned to hold its annual performance tested boar sale in conjunction with the Ag Progress Days event.

The sale, which offers swine breeders an opportunity at some proven breeding stock, is scheduled to be held at 6 p.m., August 14.

Those with an interest in specific livestock information — housing, behavioral considerations, disease prevention and biosecurity, feeding, breeding — can find it at the dairy and livestock tents.

Information about the Pa. Department of Agriculture is to be available at the department's educational display.

There are educational games and displays for youth, concerning such things as insects, domestic and wild animals. An insect zoo allows them to see the bugs close up, and learn what is harmless and what isn't.

Soils information, varieties of vegetables and fruits being tested

Interim Dean Alter Welcomes You

Do you know what it takes to transform a bushel of raw potatoes into a bag of chips at the grocery store? Or what happens to a grain of wheat that s designed to become part of a loaf of bread or a box of crackers?

If these questions intrigue you, you've come to the right place for answers. This year, Ag Progress Days focuses on our food system — an amazing network that begins with raw commodities growing on the farm and ends in the bounty of food on your table. A tour through the College of Agricultural Sciences Exhibits Building will show you how these commodities are harvested, processed, and turned into finished products. You can see what "value-added" means to producers, processors and consumers and learn how our state works to make sure all of its citizens have access to the food they need. You'll also find out some surprising facts — for example, that Pennsylvania is the largest food-processing state in the Northeast.

On every street of the Ag Progress Days site, you'll find interesting things to see and do. You can talk to experts about your garden, learn about natural resource conservation, or climb on board a brand new tractor and take it for a test drive. There are about 300 commercial and non-commercial exhibitors here this year, all showing off the very latest in equipment and technology. New demonstrations are devised to display innovative planting, growing and harvesting methods and how to avoid injuries. Kids can have a buggy good time at the insect zoo and learn what 4-H has to offer.

You'll find both old and new at Ag Progress Days. You can take a trip back in time with a visit to the Pasto Museum or travel the globe by getting caught up in the World Wide Web. And since Ag Progress Days is a celebration of agriculture, please, don't forget to eat while you're here! You'll find everything from fried mushrooms and funnel cakes to Penn State ice cream.

We're very pleased to have you here. I hope you, your family and friends have a wonderful day

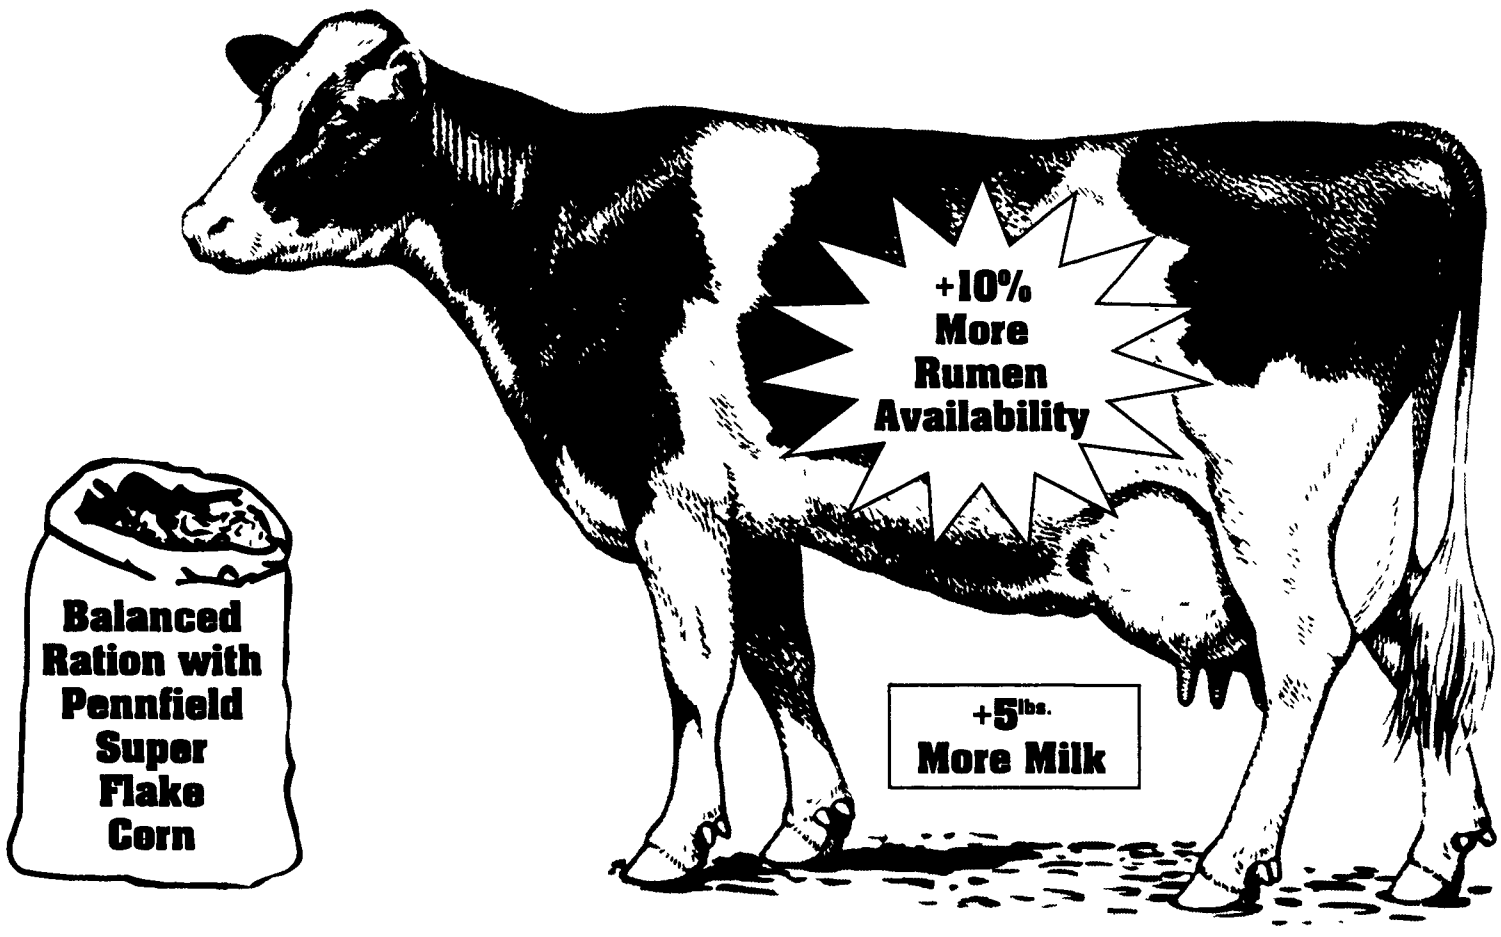
Pennfield's New Super Flaked Corn

► ► ► THE PROCESS INVOLVES ◄ ◄ ◄

1) Cleaning the corn
2) Soaking or steeping the corn for a prescribed period of time
3) Applying steam to the corn before rolling
4) The specially conditioned corn is then rolled between 2 large rollers
5) The wet flat rolled corn is then processed by a special unit that removes the moisture and dries the finished flake back down to normal corn moisture
6) The finished product resembles a bright yellow corn flake (makes you want to get a bowl full and add milk and sugar)

WHY IS SUPER FLAKED CORN BETTER?

Flat rolled steam flaking disrupts the cellular structure of the corn kernels (gelatinization) and increases sites for microbial attachments resulting in improved starch (carbohydrate) digestion in the rumen. In simple terms, the cow uses more of the nutrients because the rumen bugs can get to them and much less corn nutrient goes out in the manure.



EFFECTS OF CORN PROCESSING ON DAIRY COW PERFORMANCE

Research conducted by the University of Arizona on Western Processed Flat Rolled Steam Flaked Corn shows the kind of improvement you can expert.
In the studies below, average milk production INCREASED ABOUT 5 LBS./COW/DAY, protein yield increased about .2 lbs./cow/day and % usually increased, fat yield increased about .1 lb./cow/day and % decreased

Item	Regular Steam Rolled	Flat Rolled Steam Flake
Milk, lbs/day	83.8	88.4
Protein, lbs/day	1.18	1.28
Protein, %	3.11	3.2

Univ. of AZ, JDS 77 (Suppl. 1):383 1994

Item	Regular Steam Rolled	Flat Rolled Steam Flake
Milk yield, lbs/day	70.8	76.3
Milk protein, lbs/day	2.03	2.23
Milk protein, %	2.89	2.93
Milk fat, lbs/day	2.17	2.30
Milk fat, %	3.06	3.01

Univ. of AZ, JDS 77: 1038 1994

Item	Regular Steam Rolled	Flat Rolled Steam Flake
Milk, lbs/day	76.3	81.6
Protein, lbs/day	2.26	2.40
Protein, %	2.99	2.95
Fat, lb/day	2.32	2.40
Milk fat, %	3.06	2.96

Univ. of AZ, JDS 78 (Suppl. 1):210 1995

NOTE Because of processing a flatter flake there is less weight per volume of feed. This means that less will fit on trucks and in bins. Volume will increase 5 to 15% depending on the inclusion level of corn Keep this in mind when ordering feed. Also, grain scoops or volume based grain feeders need to be recalibrated for SUPER FLAKE containing feeds Feed amounts required based on actual weights

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
AUGUST 7, 1996

Very little excitement in the grain trade, today. Wheat moved slightly higher again on indications the new crop spring wheat condition and yields may only be average this year. Corn bids were mixed again, continued favorable growing weather pressured bids but overnight sales to South Korea, offered support. Soybean bids climbed slightly higher in reaction to news China may soon be back in the market, but that is yet to be seen. Some indications that Taiwan is seeking US soybeans, pushed bids upward. Wheat 5 to 6 cents higher. Corn mostly 2 to 16 cents higher. Sorghum 3 to 8 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 5 cents higher. The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

AUGUST 12-18, 1996

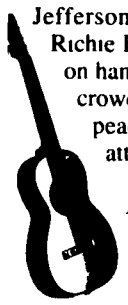
WOODSTOCK TURNS 27

Mud and rain, music and art, crowds, new babies, love beads, peace signs, war protests, tie-dyed T-shirts or ponchos or bare skin . . They were all part and parcel of the Woodstock Music and Art Fair that ran from August 14 to 16, 1969, on a farm near Woodstock, New York Carlos Santana, the Who, Jefferson Airplane, Joan Baez, Jimi Hendrix, and Richie Havens were just a few of the musical greats on hand. Food, water, and medicines ran dry as the crowds — and rain clouds — swelled, but relative peace was maintained even as the numbers in attendance surged over 300,000.



By the time we got to Woodstock, we were half a million strong . . .

– Joni Mitchell song

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ To remove mud from suede shoes, let them dry thoroughly, then brush with a stiff-bristled brush.

SIXTIES GRANOLA

4-1/2 cups old-fashioned rolled oats (not quick)
2 cups shredded coconut
3/4 cup chopped walnuts
3/4 cup sliced almonds
3/4 cup canola oil
1/2 cup honey
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup raisins
1/4 cup chopped, dried apricots

Preheat oven to 350° F. Mix first four ingredients and spread in a large shallow baking dish Mix oil, honey, and cinnamon and pour over granola Stir well to coat evenly Bake about 30 minutes, stirring occasionally, until oats have turned golden Remove from oven, and cool, stirring frequently, to keep mixture from sticking together Stir in dried fruits (Others may be substituted.) Store in an airtight container

Makes about 9 cups.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If two rainbows appear at once, they presage more rain to come.

When the glowworm lights her lamp, the air is always damp.

New Moon on its back indicates wind. New Moon on its point indicates rain in summer, snow in winter.

OPINION

Jump In The Pick-Up Truck

Now is the time to plan to go to Ag Progress Days. Starting on Tuesday and running through Thursday, Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences' annual showcase event will provide you with plenty tc see and do this year at Rockspring in Centre County. Exhibits demonstrate how commodities are harvested, processed, and turned into finished products. Did you know that Pennsylvania is the largest food-processing state in the Northeast?

Along with machinery of various brands working side by side in the field, the show offers many features with great visual elements, including horse exhibitions, an insect zoo, live hawks, snakes, owls, llamas, and young livestock. A tractor ride-and-drive area offers an opportunity to test-drive the newest tractor models and is popular with farmers. Working combines are part of the promised addition to this year's event. And a tractor roll-over demonstration will remind you again to be careful around farm tractors and other equipment.

Jump in the pick-up truck or the family car and join us at Ag Progress Days. Parking and admission to the event are free. We hope to see you there.

Now Is The Time

To Attend Ag Progress Days

The 1996 edition of Penn State's Ag Progress Days will be August 13-15 at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of Penn State on Rt. 45.

This is a free event that showcases the latest technology and research in agriculture. Admission and parking is free.

The grounds will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday and 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. There will be a tractor ride and drive area, more than 300 exhibitors, field demonstrations on fence building, combine harvesting, mowing, composting and bailing, and tours.

Plan now to attend Ag Progress Days and meet old friends, learn something new, and see the latest in agriculture.

To Check Tobacco Fields For Blue Mold

According to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, blue mold, a potentially destructive fungal disease of tobacco, has been found in Lancaster County tobacco.

Checking fields are important for two reasons. First, there is a foliar-applied fungicide labeled for use in Pennsylvania this year that does an excellent job of stopping the spread of the fungi. Secondly, and a very important reason, is to identify the infection and report it.

Reporting the occurrence of blue mold is critical in finding ways to combat it in the future. You should check fields as soon as possible, looking for yellow spots on the leaf. If a yellow spot is found, it is necessary to check the underside of the leaf for the fungi.

Blue Mold will appear as a blue gray fuzzy growth on the underside of the leaf. Farmers who think they have blue mold should contact Robert Anderson at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Office at (717) 394-6851.

To Think Safety

Some safety reminders for this summer season.

To reduce heat stress, drink plenty of liquids on hot days to replenish body fluids lost to perspiration. Also, wear clothes that breathe and will permit excess body heat to escape.

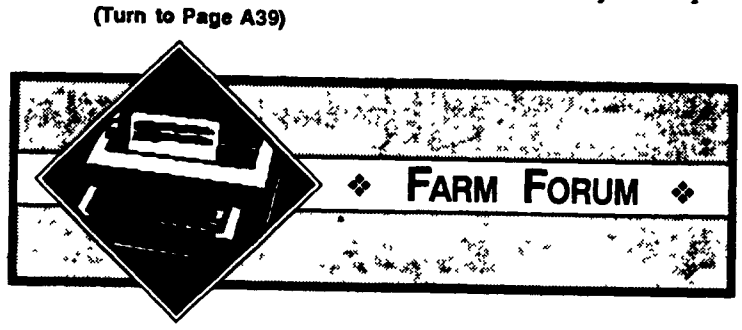
To prevent skin cancer, wear head and face protection that covers the ears and back of the neck to prevent serious sunburn injury.

Re-apply sun block during periods of high body perspiration when performing farm chores.

Children between ages 1 and 16 are at the greatest risk of suffocation in flowing grain. If children are playing on, riding on, or trying to remove grain in grain transport vehicles, they may become engulfed in the grain.

Parents and children need to be aware of the potential hazards of flowing grain. Flowing grain will pull people into the grain pile and cause death by suffocation. Keep people off grain piles, including transport vehicles. Caution today could save a life.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Challenge: Dare to confront what can only be imagined."



Editor:

I was so pleased, but certainly not surprised to see that Nelson Ebersole had contributed a Holstein calf for the 4-H Club youth.

There are few people who are as genuine, sincere and caring as this gentleman. Nelson is a businessman, but he has never lost the "common touch." He truely cares about his fellow man as well as being a steward of the land.

I have always been impressed with how knowledgeable farmers are about so many topics. Nelson displays a matter of fact knowledge of so much and conveys that information so easily to others. That, I'm sure, has made him so successful in his real estate dealings. His honesty is what makes him so comforable with himself and others.

Nelson knows that our future rests with our children, and he is doing his part to help them succeed. Just imagine what could be accomplished if we all did things to help.

Thanks for sharing with us, all the good deeds, that make the whole world better.

IF YOU WANT TO BE HAPPY
August 11, 1996

Background Scripture:
Psalms 119 1-16, 45, 105, 129, 130
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 7 21-28

The late Methodist Bishop Gerald Kennedy told of a young married man who read all the psychoanalytic and self-helps he could find One day, his young wife, who tried to live up to all that he found in these books, rebelled, saying "Now that we've found real happiness, couldn't we have some fun, too?"

There's a deep underlying suspicion that real happiness and fun are incompatible Perhaps it depends upon our definitions of "fun" and "happiness " Harry Emerson Fosdick found that "Happiness is not mostly pleasure, it is mostly victory." Victory comes first, followed by pleasure, bringing happiness In that order Fun that is not founded upon victory is very fleeting and does not amount to happiness

But what kind of victory? The Psalmist who wrote Psalm 119 would say that victory is living by the law of God–in a sense, being victorious over ourselves and the world This is contrary to contemporary wisdom that regards the law as a burden that stifles our pleasure But, when we live for pleasure alone, we soon find it a pretty unpleasurable experience True pleasure consists in living in harmony with God So, the Psalmist begins Psalm 114 with these words "Blessed/Happy are those whose way is blameless, who walk in the law of the Lord Blessed are those who keep his testimonies, who seek him with their whole heart, who also do no wrong, but walk in his ways" (119 1-3)

ANACROSTIC

This is the longest psalm in the Bible and it is constructed as an acrostic, a design whereby there are 22 strophes (sections) of eight lines each, and each of them beginning with one of the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet God is addressed or referred to in every one of its 178 verses. It is a repeated tribute to the law, using a variety of terms to stress the richness of it: law, testimonies, ways, precepts, statutes, commandments, promise and word Alexander Maclaren said this psalm reminded him of a violinist who had but one string to play upon–the law of God–but who out of that one string brought perfect music.

One of these in the psalm is the repeated testimony of the Psalmist that the law is a delight, not a weight around his neck "In the way of thy testimonies I delight as much as in all riches" (v 14) "How sweet are thy words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth" (103)

Why does the Psalmist delight in the law of God? Because it leads him to live in a way that brings him the joy of obeying and pleasing God "Thy testimonies are my delight, they are my counselors" (v.24). "I hold back my feet from every evil way, in order to keep thy word" (v 101) "Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path" (v.105)

ADVERSITY & LAMENT

But this is not a psalm of unceasing delight, because, like us, the Psalmist's faith is constantly tested with adversity and the psalm is a list of woes: persecution, false accusations, temptation, and intellectual doubt "Even though princes sit plotting against me " (v.23) "Godless men utterly deride me" (v 51) "They draw near who persecute me with evil purpose " (v 150) His love of the law has not insulated him from the troubles of the world. He is not having unrelenting fun!

So, throughout the psalm, his laments contend with his words of praise "O forsake me not utterly!" (v 8) "How long must thy servant endure? When wilt thou judge those who persecute me?" (v 84) "I am sorely afflicted, give me life, O Lord, according to thy word" (v 107)

He believes in the law and has found it his only salvation But tribulation threatens to shake him off the path he means to follow So he prays for victory–and in victory he will find his happiness That's why God's law is his delight

Dale-Pride Holsteins Shows Lebanon Area Fair Grand

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — ML-DP Jed Blooming, a junior 2-year-old Holstein owned and bred by Dale Hostetter, of Annville, was named the grand champion of the Lebanon Area Fair open division Holstein show on August 2.

The Hostetter family also showed the reserve grand champion Holstein, Dale-Pride Furious Prim, a senior 3-year-old also bred and owned, in a show judged by Richard Packard, of Troy.

The grand champion was a Juniper Rotate Jed-Et daughter out of herd cow ML-DP Marles Blossom.

The reserve grand champion was a daughter of farm-bred bull Dale-Pride Val Furious and dam Dale-Pride Melvin Priss.

The Holstein show capped a week-long showing of animals at the Lebanon Area Fair.

The John and Margaret Bomgardner family, owners of Loving-Meadows Farm in Ono, earned the premier breeder and exhibitor of the show, having also shown both the junior and reserve junior champions.

Both families have been consistent exhibitors at the fair and have done consistently well.

The junior champion was a winter calf, Loving-Meadows Magda, a Carnation Counselor daughter, bred and owned by Nelson Bomgardner. A spring calf, Loving-Meadows Son Blo, owned and bred by John Bomgardner, was named reserve junior champion.

There were about 125 entries in the show, with few scratches from the catalog.

The Lebanon Holstein show still retains bull classes for exhibitors, though that practice has become obsolete at most local dairy shows.

The winner of the grand champion bull was a junior yearling, Loving Meadows Morrel, bred and owned by Margaret Bomgardner. A son of Quality Ultimate, his dam is Loving-Meadows Gen Mi.

The reserve grand champion bull was a calf, Promise-Lane Billijo Bro, bred and owned by Amanda Martin, Lebanon.

The Bomgardner family also showed the junior best three females, the senior best three, the top produce of dam, and were second to the Hostetter family in the dairy herd class.

To Host Summer Picnic

WRIGHTSVILLE (York Co.) — About noon, Saturday, Aug. 24, farmers and friends of agriculture will converge on Sam Lewis State Park, the scenic site for the third annual summer picnic hosted by Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter's Fellowship of Christian Farmers (FCF).

Donald L. Hershey, president of the chapter, said farmers, friends of agriculture, and their families are welcome to attend. Hershey, of Manheim, notes that the park is high on a hill above the Susquehanna River, about three miles south of the U.S. 30 Wrightsville exit.

"If you need to get away from work for part of a day (and most of us do), this picnic would be a great refresher and a chance to relax with family. With all the business pressures of farming today, everyone needs to take time to replenish the spirit," said the FCF leader. And if you want, bring your kite.

Uplifting music, song, and thoughts will be provided by special guest Bruce Heffner, president of Touchstone Ministries, Elizabethtown. His blend of trumpet and vocal music has taken him across the country and around the world presenting concerts and youth programs. His music has graced most Christian radio stations across the country and the 700 Club television program.

A complete pork and beef barbecue will be provided at a cost of $5 per adult and $3 per child between 3 and 12 years. Children under 3 years of age are free.

Reservations should be made by Monday, Aug. 19. Make checks payable to Fellowship of Christian Farmers. Mail reservations to Donald L. Hershey, FCF, 793 Orchard Rd., Manheim, PA 17545, (717) 665-3808.

Lebanon County Livestock Auction Raises $79,505

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon Area Fair livestock auction netted an overall total of $79,505 on the sale of 233 animals August 2.

One the highlights of the fair, the annual sale is held so that project meat animals raised by youth for competition at the Lebanon Area Fair can be sold and generate funds for the youth, who have historically used the money to reinvest in their animal projects, or save for further education.

Those who purchase animals during the livestock auction don't have to take possession, but can sell them to auction-selected processors at market rates announced at the sale.

This year's meat processors that bulk-purchased livestock competition entries were Walter Dunlap Inc. for market lambs; Hatfield Meats Inc. for market hogs, and Dutchway Farm Markets for steers.

According to sale officials, this year's sale saw continued strong support from historic buyers as well as some welcomed new buyers.

Auctioneer for the sale was Harry Bachman, of Annville, a longtime supporter of that sale, as well as a supporter of youth livestock activities in the county, the state Farm Show livestock auction and other youth-benefitting activities. He was helped at the podium by Brian Kreider.

The Lebanon Area Fair offers live animal beef, sheep and hog competitions, as well as carcass-animal competition, or what is commonly referred to as "foot-to-rail" competitions, for sheep and hogs.

In the carcass competitions, animals are judged live in the ring, and then the animals are slaughtered and the carcasses evaluated.

Considered in the carcass evaluations are the records documenting the rate of gain of the animals, as well as other considerations as are included in standard commercially used indexing formulas.

Only the top hog and lamb carcasses are offered for sale at the livestock auction. The meat of the champions is cut and packaged, ready for cooking and consumption.

Hogs

There were 118 market hogs sold, for a total of $37,770, including the top carcass hog.

The top carcass hog, shown by Blaine Brown, was purchased for $225 by the Agricultural Lending Group at Lebanon Valley National Bank.

Tobacco Blue Mold Returns

Senior Research Associate
Bob Anderson,
Extension Agent
Penn State

Tobacco blue mold was verified by Bob Anderson in a field near Ephrata on Aug. 6. The blue mold was sporulating which means other tobacco is susceptible to the airborne spores.

We would expect there are other infections in Pennsylvania grown tobacco, but they have not been notice. The disease started last week.

What are we recommending now that we have blue mold in Pennsylania? If your tobacco is topped or is ready to top, we are not recommending any sprays for blue mold control. If you find blue mold and the tobacco is near topping, top the tobacco. After tobacco is topped, blue mold infection is slowed.

We think topping somehow produces a natural change in the plant that makes it more resistant to blue mold. For tobacco that is not ready to top, we recommend that you start spraying with Acrobat MZ. Acrobat MZ has a special Section 18 label for use on Pennsylvania grown tobacco. Based upon the results in other tobacco growing states, this is the best labeled material to control blue mold at this time in the growing season.

Do not spray Ridomil foliar — is has no label for this type of application. If the blue mold is of the Ridomil insensitive type, Ridomil will not control the blue mold.

Thorough spray coverage is important to get results from the fungicide Acrobat MZ. A single T-jet nozzle is not enough. Hollow cone nozzles and multiple nozzles per row or the use of air blast sprayers directed so all of the leaves are covered is necessary. Increased pressure and water volume are also necessary.

If weather conditions favor blue mold (frequent rain, high humidity, dew, and fog), you should spray every 5 to 7 days. If the weather is not favorable for blue mold, the length between sprays can be longer than 5-7 days. A maximum of 4 applications can be made, but you should stop spraying 30 days before harvest (topping stage or sooner).

The rate of Acrobat MZ application varies depending upon the size of the tobacco and the amount of water used when spraying. Look at the label for these rates and other information.

Since this is a special labeled product, you must obtain a Pennsylvania Section 18 Recordkeeping Form which must be returned to the Pennsylvania Dept. of Agriculture 30 days after the last application. These forms should be available from the place you buy Acrobat MZ or you can get them from us.

Remember tobacco is a high income crop. Do not delay protecting your crop against blue mold. Blue mold not only reduces yield, but will reduce quality and the price you receive for your tobacco.

Please call us if your need more information and let us know if you find blue mold in your tobacco. Contact Bob Anderson, Penn State Extension, Lancaster County, (717) 394-6851 or John O. Yocum, Southeastern Agricultural Research and Extension Center, (717) 653-4728.

Four-Way Tie For Premier Exhibitor Banner At Northern Tier Championship Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — History was made at the second Northern Tier Holstein Championship Show as Bob Parr announced premier exhibitor.

After checking the figures for accuracy, the clerks of the show confirmed a 4-way tie for the coveted award between Lynn and Bonnie Miller, Sweet Peas Farm, Jericho Dairy, and Fraley Farms.

Besides sharing the title for premier exhibitor, Lynn and Bonnie Miller also had the distinction of being named the premier breeder of the show, which boasted 155 animals and was judged by Richard Keene.

The Millers also showed the grand champion of the day, Royal Haven Inspire Quill, a 4-year-old.

The reserve senior and grand champion of the day was Adam Fraley's senior 3-year-old, Braedawn Inspire Angel-ET. Fraley's "Angel" was also the grand champion of the youth division.

Flanking the grand champion in the youth division was Steven Pavelski's senior 2-year-old, JoSan Raider Bay-TW, who was named the reserve senior and reserve grand champion.

Among the junior animals, John Castrogiovanni showed the overall junior champion. His animal, Castlemont Astre Trisha, was a spring yearling. The reserve junior champion of the open division was Norkval Encore Laser, a summer yearling owned by Linda and Gerald Kisner.

In the youth division, Jamie Crawford's winter calf, Ho-Crawf Sunbuck Leann, was brought to the front of the arena and named junior champion. Following her was Adam Fraley with his fall calf, C Naylorcroft Prelude Pansy, reserve junior champion.

A list of the top three open and junior placings follows:

Beltsville Field Day Boosts Tricentennial

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Colonial interpreters from the Accokeek Foundation will add an historic touch as the University of Maryland's Beltsville facility of the Central Maryland Research and Education Center holds its annual field day on Saturday morning, Aug. 17.

The field day is a sanctioned event in this year's ongoing Prince George's County Tricentennial observance. Everyone is invited to gain an appreciation of the role of agriculture and agricultural research in state and local history, observe modern farming practices, socialize with friends, and enjoy a low-cost noon lunch served by the Calvert Caballeros 4-H Club.

The day's schedule begins with complimentary coffee and doughnuts at 8:30 a.m. Two separate hayride educational tours will depart every 20 minutes from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Tour I will feature presentations by active and retired professionals from the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, University of Maryland at College Park. One tour stop will deal with managing the white-tail deer problem.

Tour II will highlight cutting-edge research being conducted by U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center (BARC). And representatives from the BARC visitor center will present an historical review of USDA-BARC contributions to Maryland agriculture.

The university's Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station has been conducting research at the Beltsville location since 1973 under a joint arrangement with the USDA. The research focuses on agronomic, environmental, and entomological topics.

To reach the Maryland research site from the north, take Interstate Highway 95 or I-295 (Baltimore-Washington Parkway) to Highway 212 (Powder Mill Road). Exit to the east; turn right (after I-295) onto Soil Conservation Road. Proceed about one mile and turn left onto Beaver Dam Road. Follow Beaver Dam Road for about one mile. The facility is on your right.

From the south and east, take I-95 (Capital Beltway) north to Exit 23. Follow Highway 193 (Greenbelt Road) east, and turn left onto Soil Conservation Road. Proceed about one mile; turn right onto Beaver Dam Road, and go about one mile. The facility is on your right.

Jersey Supreme at Troy Fair Youth Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — "I appreciate all the breeds out here," said Steve Wood, who, along with Glenn Tripp, judged the Troy Fair Junior Dairy Show recently.

Before the two anounced their choice for supreme champion, Wood said, "As we look out here and evaluate the animals, we can talk about rib and openness. We can talk about angularity. Today it comes down to one cow — the dry Jersey. She has a beautiful dry udder and you have to love the frame and the sound feet and legs. Today we have no trouble making her the supreme champion."

Senior 2-year-old Calkins Farm Skybuck Pamela, owned by Ryan Calkins of Troy, captured the senior and grand champion Holstein honors. David Packard of Troy had the reserve senior and grand champion with Pack-Herd Encore Bazuka, also a senior 2-year-old.

When selecting the junior champion Holstein, judge Steve Wood said he was selecting the animals that were the best for their age.

"I have a soft spot in my heart for longevity; however, today I feel the younger animals are more outstanding," he said.

Junior 3-year-old Locust Lane Chad's Suprise was in the top position while the reserve senior champion award went to Locust Lane Spot's Sara, a dry cow.

awards in the Brown Swiss show. The grand champion, junior 3-year-old Elm Brook Trouba Parsley, was shown by Heather Yurkanin. Filling the reserve place was Amberleigh Yurkanin's junior 2-year-old, Elm Brook JPR Jasmine.

The junior and reserve junior champions were both owned by John Yurkanin Jr. In the top spot was spring yearling Elm Brook Pretus Tiara, followed by the reserve junior champion, Elm Brook Pretus Abu, a summer yearling.

One Guernsey made up the entire Guernsey show. That animal, Shale Hill Perfect Nola, a spring calf owned by Lucas Trowbridge of Camptown, was named the Guernsey champion.

In total, 90 exhibitors presented more than 200 animals to the judges. Evaluating the exhibitors on fitting and showmanship skills were Roger Sherwood of Meshoppen and Paul Moyer of Roaring Branch.

Whitetail Hotspot Signup Underway

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) is reminding farmers that the deadline for signup in this year's "hotspot" hunt is Friday, Sept. 6. Farmers suffering crop damage due to deer should contact their regional Pennsylvania Game Commission office to enroll.

The "hotspot" program, known officially as the Deer Damage Area Program, allows a hunter with an antlerless license for that county to harvest an antlerless deer on an enrolled farm during the regular firearms antlered deer or "buck" hunting season. This year's season will run from Dec. 2 to Dec. 14. Late season "hotspot" hunting has been eliminated.

"Preliminary reports of a Penn State study show wildlife caused $74 million worth of crop losses in 1994 with deer being the biggest culprits," said Joel Rotz, PFB's director of local affairs. "The hotspot program gives farmers a way to address this problem."

Enrollment in the "hotspot" program for two previous consecutive years is a prerequisite for acceptance in the permit hunting program. The deer depredation permit hunting program, which started last year, allows a farmer with crop damage to permit hunting of one antlerless deer for every 10 acres of cultivated land during specified off-season times.

Farmers interested in the "hotspot" program will be visited by a wildlife conservation officer this fall and given the opportunity to enroll in one of the agency's public access programs. The farmers will be given green signs which will alert hunters that identified areas contain too many deer and are open for public hunting.

Later, hunters will be able to obtain listings of properties enrolled in the "hotspot" program by sending a stampled, self-addressed, business-size envelope to the regional office for the county in which the hunter holds an antlerless deer license.

For more information about the "hotspot" program, farmers should contact the Game Commission regional office for their county at the following toll-free numbers:

Empire Farm Days Has Small Beginning: Now Major Northeast Farm Trade Show

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

SENECA FALLS, NY. — What started back in 1933 as an agricultural show sponsored by the Empire State Potato Club at "Potato Field Days" has grown to one of the major farm trade shows in the Northeast. With 552 exhibitors of farm machinery and services on 300 acres of the Rodman Lott and Sons Farm located along Rt. 414 south of town, the event now know as Empire Farm Days attracted 75,000 visitors, including many from Canada this week on the three-day run Tuesday through Thursday.

"Each year we try to learn something from the year before so we can improve the show each year," said Melanie Wickham, show manager. "For example, last year we initiated the Dairy Profit Seminars as part of the show. These seminars offer the latest management and profitability strategies from those who know the business. Dairy producers, employees and industry experts share information with individual presentations and in a roundtable format.

"In addition, since exhibitors are a very important part of the show, this year we have divided the exhibit area into zones, and officers of the show spread out over the grounds each morning to talk to each exhibitor to see if they have any needs," Wickham said. "We try to meet those needs immediately rather than have an exhibitor unhappy for a whole day."

One of the highlights of the show is the field demonstrations. Here farmers had the opportunity to see competing makes and models of equipment under field trial conditions. Tillage and hay making

Crowds were constant at the regularly scheduled equipment demonstrations.

Big equipment on display for all to see.

Kayla Vossler, five year-old daughter of Dan and Rose Vossler, Wellsville, N.Y., gives the cameraman a milking demonstration on the fiberglass cow.

Farmers had the opportunity to get in close to the working machines to examine field operation.

The hugh field of display equipment included many tents and flying flags.

These small farmers enjoy a pretend tractor drive. Austin 2, and Tylor 3, were with their grandfather Robert Woodworth, from Swego, N.Y.

Empire Farm Days

demonstrations ran almost continously with opportunity for visitors to then get up close to the equipment and ask questions from commercial representatives. On the north side of the large exhibition field, farmers had the opportunity to test drive the newest models of tractors.

In an effort to improve agricultural literacy in New York State, the New York Farm Bureau presented "Children—The Future of Agriculture." This program included activities for kids of all ages to learn more about New York's farmers, their crops, their animals, and how they get our food from field to the table.

Safety on the farm was another highlight of the Farm Bureau Family Program. McGruff, the crime dog, helped the kids to learn to be safe both on and off the farm.

Really there was almost no end to the events the large crowds could enjoy. Tractor safety, skid steer dances, bandsaws at work, fence building, hay making, working mixer wagons, combining, building construction, antique tractors, vegetable and fruit speciality equipment, livestock handling, and dairy and livestock breed displays were all a part of the show.

"Empire Farm Days gives farmers the unique opportunity to experience the latest in agricultural technology all in one place. With more than 1,000 brand names to look over, they can talk with the people responsible for making it all happen. Farmers can touch, see, and examine the actural products and equipment.

"We have a wonderful group of people to work with at the show," Wickhan said. "The people who serve on my staff are a pleasure to work with. And the organizations really work together in a show of committment to bring to farmers in the Northeast the newest techniques and equipment available to agriculture."

More than 500 exhibitors showed their equipment and services at Empire Farm Days this week near Seneca Falls, N.Y.

Cooperating with the Empire State Potato Club to sponsor the state farm days are the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, the New York Equipment Dealers' Association, the American Agriculturist, the New York State Farm Equipment Club, the New York State Electric and Gas Companmy, and the Cornell Cooperative Extension.

for garden and commercial production, field or greenhouse.

Apple trees growing like grape vines on trellises. An apple museum with historic cultivars, etc.

A crop and soil science tent and demonstration plots are to be available, as well as an "Ask the Experts" booth, manned by a crew of Penn State specialists in agronomy, entomology and plant pathology.

More than 300 commercial exhibitors are to be set up and eager to discuss their latest offerings.

For those with concerns about health care, for the first time this year, a Health and Safety for Rural Families tent is to be open offering 12 featured programs about a range of rural health issues, such as getting primary care, and nutrition.

Computer workshops for youth is also a relatively recent popular area. There, the Colleg eof AGriculture Sciences is offering to take neophytes into the world of computers and their applications in providing information, communications, management, and mechanical precision.

And food.

There a number of food booths offering a variety of meal choices for all. A morning walk through the area, taking in the smells can help decide what's to be for lunch.

Familiar faces are also part of the Ag Progress Days experience for many, as well as the opportunity to meet new people and share experiences.

In addition to some of the dignitaries from academia and government who can be expected to visit the area, there are also to be a number of youth circulating the grounds who are to be available to discuss the Farm Show Scholarship Fund.

A foundation formed several years ago at the state Farm Show to provide scholarships for deserving youth who exhibit livestock at the state Farm Show.

While the specific academic pursuit of the potential scholarship recipients is not considered, the program has grown quickly with support from those who have been supporting the youth livestock programs by purchasing animals at the annual Farm Show livestock auction.

The scholarship fund began out of a need to provide supporters with a way to support the youth in their educational pursuits, without overrewarding one individual over another.

Excess funds received by youth during the sale of their livestock during the sale have been set aside for the scholarship fund. This allows all who want to provide support for all youth to participate in the event.

Those who don't wish to participate in an auction event, can also donate funds to the scholarship program.

Last year, 16 youth received $1,000 scholarships as a result of the program. This year at Ag Progress, some of the scholarship recipients of past years can be expected to be circulating the area to discuss the program and its benefits.

The more participants there are, the more scholarships that can be awarded, said Dennis Grumbine, Farm Show director.

For those who don't get the opportunity to talk with any of the youth, more information can be received by writing to Grumbine at the Farm Show Complex, 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisuburg, PA 17120.

Youth interested in applying for a scholarship should write to Tony Dobrowsky, at the same address.

Pa.DHIA Lab Receives Excellent From National

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Recently Pa. DHIA received word from Philip Dukas, chief executive office of National DHIA, that the milk analysis lab scored a perfect 100 percent for the 1995-96 scoring year.

Philip Dukas stated, "This score is rarely attained under the rigorous protocols operated by National DHIA. Keep in mind this includes not only the snapshot of the on-site evaluation, but also an entire year's processing of the control samples."

The Pennsylvania DHIA laboratory is located in State College. The lab analyzes approximately 330,000 samples monthly for fat, protein and/or somatic cell counts. Milk urea nitrogen is also offered at a competitive price. The lab operates on a six-day work week with two shifts daily.

Dixie Burris serves as lab manager as well as manager of membership development and Cathy Haughwout serves as quality control specialist. Along with these two positions there are seven full-time positions and 6 to 10 part-time employees are responsible for testing activities.

The NCDHIP scorecard includes being scored for samples being within tolerance. This involves an unkown sample being provided by DQCI and assesing the instrument performance monthly. As of June 6, 1996, 100 percent of monthly unknowns were in tolerance.

Homogenization is also assessed. When fat globules in milk are larger than the fat wavelength utilized in infrared transmission analyzers, light scattering occurs which leads to inaccuracies in analytical measurements. For this reason it is necessary to insure, on a regular basis, that the internal homogenizer, which reduces the size of the fat globules, is functioning properly.

Pennsylvania DHIA assesses homogenization weekly or more frequently if there is a suspected problem or if major equipment maintenance has been performed. The traditional "recycle test" is used.

A raw milk sample is obtained from a local farm (campus herd) and analyzed several times while collecting the homogenized instrument discharge. The discharge is rewarmed, tested five times, and compared to five test results on the original sample. Results are recorded and then keyed into a spreadsheet program.

The print-out includes all test results, the averages, the observed difference and the allowable difference. It is dated and identifies the instrument. The operator's initials appear on the original data recording form. It is important to note that the recycle test will pass if the homogenizer is completely defective.

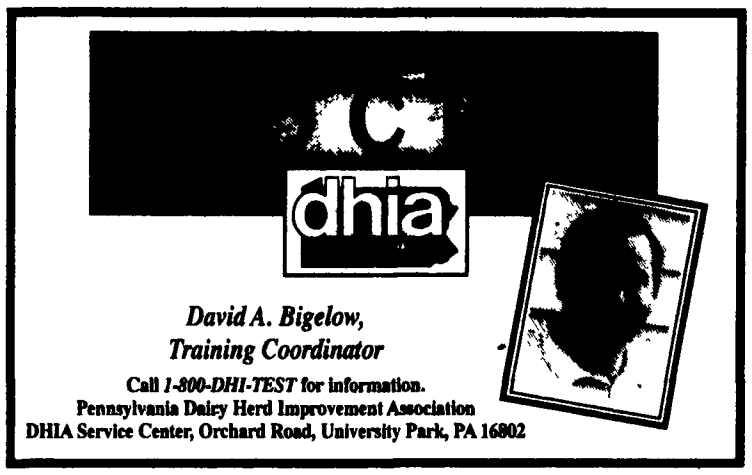
The test is only able to flag a failing homogenizer. Since this test is being done weekly, staff should be able to identify a failing homogenizer before it is completely defective.

Other options for assessing homogenization include microscopic examination of the discharge from the instrument or analysis of split samples in which one portion has been homogenized externally.

Routine assessment of purging efficiency is also necesseary to ensure that samples are not being contaminated by excess carry-over from previous measurements. Carry-over can be internal (caused by insufficient pump settings or problems in the flow system) or external (caused primarily by transfer from the automatic stirrer and pipette).

External carry-over may also have an impact on somatic cell count results.

Pennsylvania DHIA assesses purging efficiency weekly or more frequently if there is a suspected problem or if major equipment maintenance has been performed. The standard procedure which involves testing alternate pairs of water and milk samples is followed.



David A. Bigelow,
Training Coordinator

Dixie Burris, Pa.DHIA laboratory manager, and Cathy Haughwout, lab quality control specialist, stand by some equipment in the Pa.DHIA laboratory. The lab received an relatively rare high rating from National DHIA on its lab practices.

A pasteurized homogenized whole milk sample is used. Samples are tested out of 250 ml beakers and the stirrer and pipette are not wiped between cycles. Results are recorded and then keyed into a spreadsheet program. The print-out includes all test results, the totals, and appropriate calculations of "water-to-milk" and "milk-to-water" purging efficiencies for both fat and protein. It is dated and identifies the instrument. The operator's initials appear on the original data recordinng form. It would be a good idea to document the allowable range (99%-101%) on the print-out.

External carry-over (transfer from the stirrer and pipette) is more pronounced in 30 ml vials than it is in a 250 ml beaker since the degree of contamination is much higher (i.e. the same amount of contamination is being introduced into a much smaller volume). For this reason it would be a good idea to test the samples from individual vials. This will result in lower values for purging efficiency.

Such an assessment includes effects of both internal and external carry-over. If the test fails it is possible to repeat the procedure sampling in bulk while wiping the pipette and stirrer between cycles. This will allow the operator to determine if the problem is related to the flow system or is being caused by excessive transfer from the stirrer and pipette. This test is designed so that two extreme samples (i.e. water and milk) are used.

The present system of testing from bulk portions without wiping the stirrer and pipette results in increased contamination of the samples with each cycle. In effect, fat and proten are being introduced into the water and at the same time are being diluted in the milk. The samples become more alike, and the test less severe, with each cycle. If bulk portions are used, the stirrer and pipette should be wiped between analyses. Repeatability checks are necessary to assess precision and short term instrument stability.

The repeatability test is one of the most important QC measures involved in operation of IR instruments.

Pennsylvania DHIR assesses repeatability daily at start-up.

A raw milk sample obtained from a local farm is analyzed 10 times. Fat and protein results as well as the range on the second to tenth replicate are recorded. The maximum allowable range is also documented.

The form is dated and identifies the instrument. The operator can be traced via the hourly control forms or the instrument log books.

Routine monitoring of instrument zeros is necessary in order to ensure that cleaning procedures are adequate and to assess long-term instrument stability.

Pennsyvlvania DHIA checks and records instrument zeros twice daily (i.e. at start-up of each shift). All results (fat and protein) and the zero shift are recorded. The form is dated and identifies the instrument. The operator can be traced via the hourly control forms or the instrument log books.

Tracking zero drift on IR analyzers is important. Plotting this data on a control chart is an effective way of assessing long-term instrument stability.

Certain problems such as ineffective cleaning procedures, worn cells, or deactivated desiccant are more easily identified by studying plots of zero drift over time.

Routine calibration of IR instruments is necessary to ensure that predictions agree, within acceptable limits, with official chemical reference methods.

Samples used for calibration must be representative of those routinely tested in the lab and must cover a broad range for all components. Pennsylvania DHIA obtains calibration samples for DQCI weekly. Instruments are generally calibrated on Wednesday or Thursday however calibrations may be done any time if necessary (i.e. following repairs etc).

Samples are analyzed and results recorded on a handwritten form. The form is dated and iden-

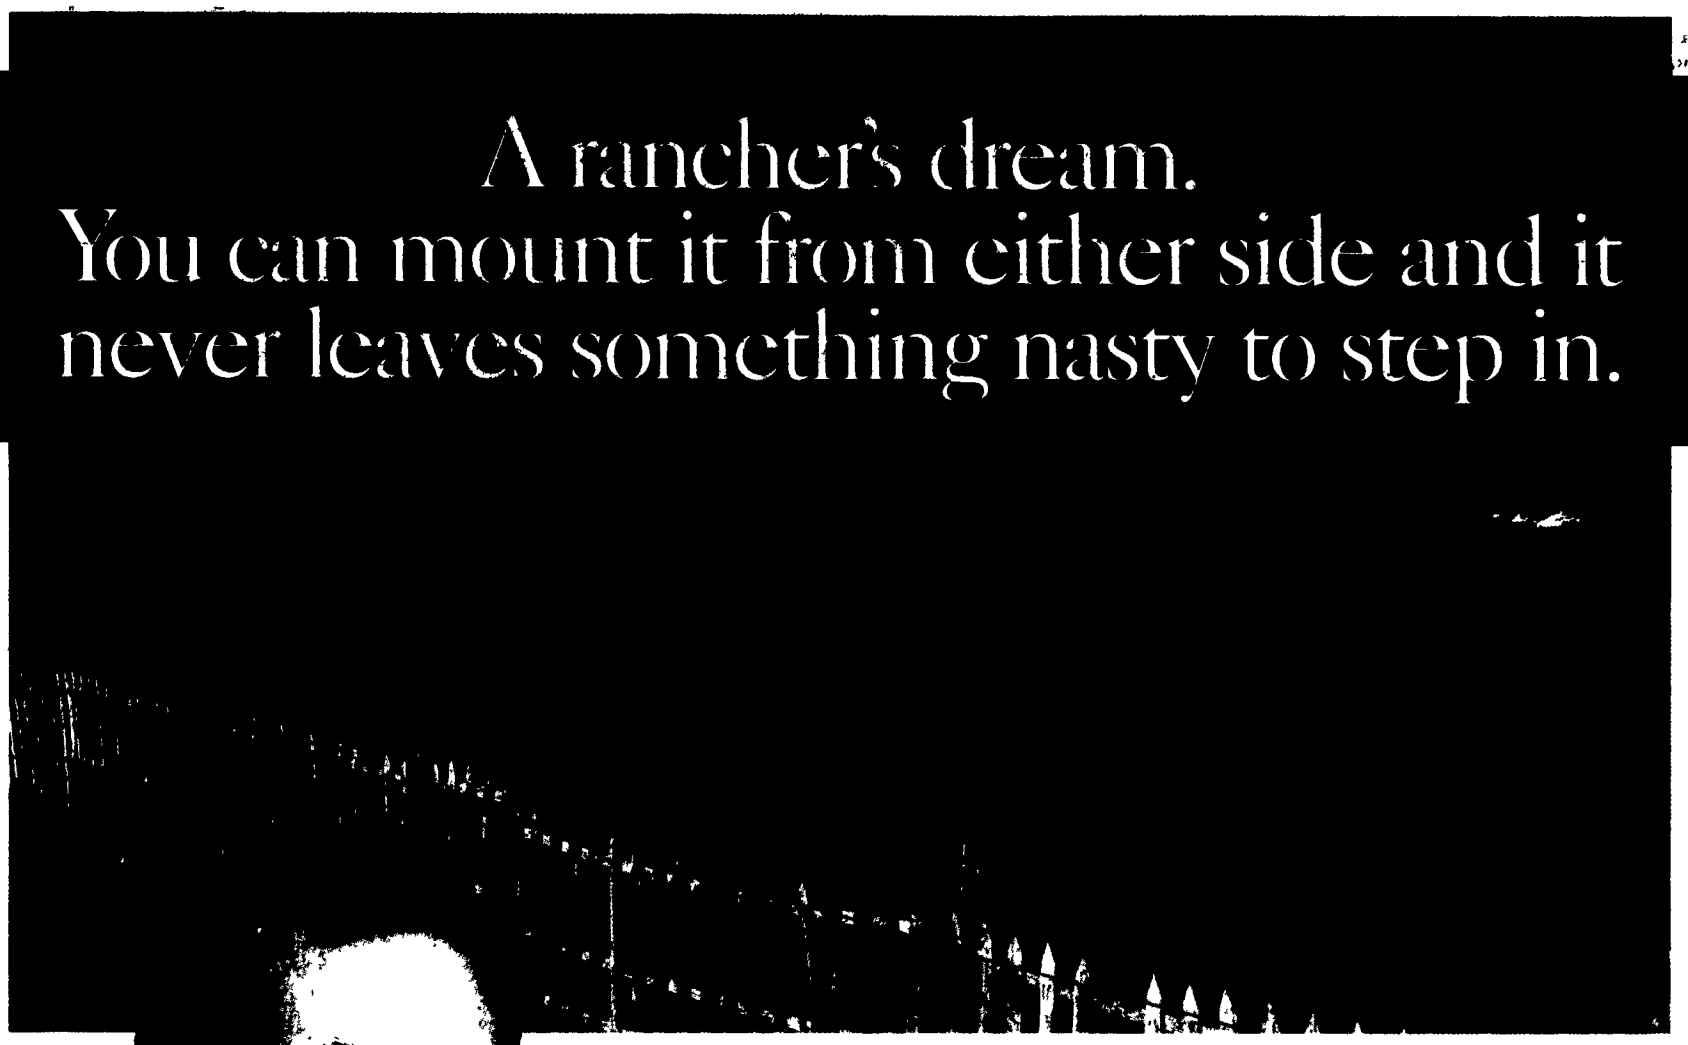
A rancher's dream. You can mount it from either side and it never leaves something nasty to step in.



A stinging sweat ran into his eyes as he watched his buddy crest the next hill. No matter how hard he struggled, he kept falling behind. Auggie Rose knew why. His buddy was riding a Polaris ATV, he wasn't. So he got himself a brand-new Magnum 4x4. Now the truth is, he bought it for its hunting prowess. But if it proved to be useful around his 600-acre beef operation outside Morgan, Utah, so much the better. Well, that liquid-cooled, 4-stroke 425cc Magnum 4x4 quickly went way beyond useful. In fact, it's fast approaching indispensable. That Magnum 4x4 takes Auggie everywhere a horse used to, with a few added advantages: it's much easier to sit on all day. And it carries a lot more equipment. Auggie's riding it to run fence line, feed livestock, irrigate – even pull a harrow. And when Auggie's all caught up with his work, he looks out at the high country and dreams about next hunting season.

Warning: ATVs can be hazardous to operate. Never carry passengers. Be especially careful on difficult terrain. Never ride on paved or public roads. Always wear a helmet and protective clothing. Polaris ATVs may not be ridden by anyone under 18, and all riders should take a training course. For safety and training information, see your dealer or call Polaris at 1-800-342-3764.

Sunnybend Tops York Holstein Show

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — A Very Good-88 senior two-year-old topped the York County Holstein Show on July 31 at the York Fairgrounds, and garnered yet another grand champion award for the Tom and June Boyer's Sunnybend Farm, York.

"Sunnybend Tangelo Counselor" was named senior and grand champion, as well as best bred and owned animal, over an impressive lineup of class winners in the title runoff. The tall, stylish and very dairy daughter of Carnation Counselor is projected to wrap up her first lactation with over 26,000 pounds milk, having milked 98 pounds at her first test in November and still producing 88 pounds at the mid-July testing.

Bred by Bridgette Boyer Bortner, the Sunnybend champion placed sixth in her class at the Spring Holstein Show. Her win is the latest in a string of local champion titles that Tom Boyer and his family have claimed during his 36 years of showing Holsteins. Pairing their champion with two other high-placing homebreds, the Boyers also claimed the prized best three senior females class award.

Standing in the reserve senior and grand champion spot was "Coredale Calypso Janis," bred by Rodman and Jane Thompson's Coredale Farm, East Berlin, and owned by Roy Thompson and Shirley Thompson Trimmer.

The five-year-old daughter of Applenotch Valiant Calypso is scored Very Good-88 with an EX-mammary and projected to over 23,000 milk in her third lactation. A noted show winner, she was the 1995 Supreme Champion at the York Fair and stood fifth in her class at the Spring Holstein Show.

Coredale's numerous wins and high placings with their homebreds garnered them the coveted Premier Breeder banner for the show. Named Premier Exhibitor was Walk-Le Holsteins, Thomasville, owned by the Leroy and Brenda Walker family.

Junior champion and best junior bred and owned honors went to 4-H exhibitor Angie Beshore, New Cumberland with her fall yearling "Beshore Stardust Linda."

Reserve junior champion was the winter yearling "Sunnybend Amy Stardust," bred and exhibited by Sunnybend Farms.

As always, one of the biggest crowd-pleasers of the day was the annual Kiddie Klass event, for eager juniors five years or older but still too young to participate as 4-H members. The field of intense, wide-eyed contenders gave

tifies the instrument and operator. The results along with chemical reference values are keyed into a spreadsheet program. The printout includes all results, chemical reference values, differences, mean differences and the standard deviation of differences. It is dated, identifies the instrument and batch, and also shows the slope and intercept changes generated by a simple linear regression.

Calibrations are only adjusted if necessary.

The "auto-cal" feature is used to make adjustments which are recorded on the original data form. Programmed "Machine Evaluations" assist operators in determining whether to recalibrate.

Once each month, calibrations are adjusted even if all parameters are in tolerance. Whenever adjustments are made, the new calibration is validated by analyzing a second set of samples. Regression equations are easily skewed by outliers. Operators are encouraged to check results carefully in order to ensure that one or two "bad samples" are not included in the calibration.

Pilot samples of known composition are used to monitor instrument stability and accuracy at regular intervals during routine analysis of samples. Pennsylvania DHIA tests pilot samples hourly during routine operation of instruments. Pilot samples (two levels) are prepared weekly by collection of a raw milk sample from a local farm.

The sample is skimmed and reblended to obtain two fat ranges. "Target" values are assigned by analysis of three separate vials in triplicate on each instrument. Targets may differ slightly among instruments. Both levels are tested at start-up then staff alternate between the high and low sample hourly.

Target values are posted on the machines and test results are recorded on a print-out which is dated and identifies the time, machine, and operator. The lab may also want to consider using UHT milk (if readily available) as an additional check. This milk is stable for long periods (4 to 6 months) and therefore allows for a common point of reference for a longer period of time.

A variety of procedures are in place to ensure that staff are able to perform all of their duties.

A documented training program is in place, operators are given routine competency exams, and a number of standard operating procedures are available.

Safety procedures and training are also enforced. Staff also participate in relevant meetings and workshops including those organized by National DHIA.

Most equipment maintenance is done in-house. Detailed schedules and records of all repairs are maintained. Parts which are subject to wear are tracked according to sample out-put and are replaced when required.

In addition to the routine QC records, Pennsylvania DHIA tracks important instrument parameters (i.e. purge readings, homogenization, calibration coefficients, etc.) in a log book for easy reference. This is an excellent tool for monitoring trends and for early identification of potential instrument problems. Calibration and other QC records are kept on site for a minimum of two years.

According to quality certification, the facility is well maintained and well suited to the number and type of analyses being conducted.

Please feel free to contact PA DHIA at 1-800-344-8378 if we can assist with your dairy operations.

of his more difficult classes of the day. His final choice for the award was the petite but extremely poised Amanda Thompson, who was celebrating her fifth birthday on show day. She is the daughter of Roy and Tammy Thompson, Wellsville.

"My Aunt Shirley taught me," she credited when asked who had helped her learn about showing the cooperative and well-trained junior calf belonging to her brother Cory. "She told me to stop her with my hand."

Other competitors in the Kiddie Klass included K.C. Beshore, Cameron Knight, Frankie Greek, Stevie Greek, Brian Cohagan and Chad Thoman.

Judge Hill noted that, with the talent displayed in the Kiddie Klass, the future of the Holstein breed in York County appeared to be in good hands.

Chester Holstein Breeders Hear Good Economic Forecast, Give Calf

The Chester County Holstein Breeders gave a calf by drawing to get a youth started into the dairy business. Winner of the calf is Kasey St.John, 13-year-old daughter of John and Kathy St.John from Lincoln University. With Kasey at the halter is from left, Rick Hess, from Hess Mills, supplying six months of feed; Ed Breckbill, president; and Rodney Bare, breeder of the calf.

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co) - A leading agricultral lender gave a positive outlook for farming for the next few years, and a 13 year-old Lincoln University youth won a new calf for her growing Holstein herd at the Chester County Holstein Field day Thursday.

Roger Roher, vice president of Agri-Finance at CoreStates Bank in Lancaster said the enthusiasm of farmers has increased in the last several months. "This is one of the things I'm looking at positively," Rohrer said. "I am (like the farmers) encouraged by the corn crop potential. Usually, in the nine counties we cover, there are some stressed areas. But this year, our region in Southcentral Pennsylvania is the best we have seen in a long time. We know the corn is not in the bins yet, but we are comforted by this start. And if we get the milk pirce up a little like we expect, we may be able to keep it going for two or three years."

Rohrer said two of the major things ag lenders look for is a farmer who is a lower cost producer than the competition and has a balance sheet that is strong to weather the low part of the economic cycle.

"I think the economic cycle has switched from where the large California herds that purchase all their feed were most profitable, to our local forage based herds," Rohrer said. "Our forages are worth a lot of money now, and we are in a cycle where we can do some catch up work on our balance sheets."

Kasey St. John, daughter of John and Kathy St.John, won the drawing for a calf. This calf from Rodney Bare's Swan Road Farm was given by the county association to a young person to encourage enthusiasm in the future of dairy farming. The registered June calf is out of an 84-point daughter of Modik Valiant Count with more than 31,000 pounds of milk. The next three dams all scored VG, and the sire of the calf is a home bred bull that is in the young sire program at 21st Century Genetics.

The gift-calf joins another calf and a cow in young Kasey growing herd of Registered Holsteins.

In other business, State Representative Arthur Hershey (R13) told the farmers that the state milk marketing board is under attack. He said part of the reason is that the Philadelphia school system has a large deficit and is blaming the price of milk as one of the reasons. But Representative Hershey said that last year the district was given special consideration by the milk marketing board, but the lower price was not passed on to the children, the district made a million and a half dollars new money from this advantage in the price of milk.

"It's wrong to blame the price of milk for economic problems," Hershey said. "If we take the floor out of the milk price, the small processors will go out of business, and the smaller producers will be out of a market. We have marketed milk this way for 60 years so stores can't use milk as a loss leader."

In the morning judging contest winners were named as follows: Men, 1. Ken Brown, 142 points; 2. Dick Breckbill and Samuel King, 138 points; and Amos Stoltzfus, 135 points.

Women, 1. Sharon Nolan, 139 points; 2. Cathy Guest, 136 points; 3. Kendra Davis, 131 points.

Youth, 1. Steven Barlow, 140 points; 2. Scott Umble, 137 points; and Marita Stoltzfus, 136 points.

Tim and Phyllis Barlow and their children Angela, Krystal, and Steven, hosted the Chester County Field Day at their Pinta-Lane Farm at Cochranville. The cow that stands at the end of the row is Fantsyland Black Star Nike that is VG with 28,723m 782f. Barlow's herd average is over 25,000m.

Lebanon Holstein To Hold Field Night

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Holstein Club has announced it will hold its annual field night 7 p.m., August 15 at the Bruce Bollinger family farm located in North Cornwall Township.

Planned is a dairy judging contest, door prizes, food and fellowship. Guest speaker is to be Kenneth Raney, member relations director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association. He is to also serve as judge for the judging contest.

The Bollinger's own Misty Hollow Holsteins and the farm's 81 head herd has an average of 23,179 pounds of milk, 812 pounds of fat and 752 pounds of protein. Their BAA is 106.

The farm is located along North Cornwall Road, between Rocherty and Zinn's Mill roads.

North Cornwall Road parallels the Snitz Creek.

From the traffic light at the intersection of Rt. 72 and Rocherty Road, travel west on Rocherty less than a mile. North Cornwall Road is the first left, almost immediately after crossing the Snitz Creek.

From Rt. 241, take Rocherty east and watch for the cement creek bridge and North Cornwall Road immediately before it.

For more information, contact field night chairman Donald Krall at (717) 949-6836.

Grazing An Option In Lower Cost Dairying

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROBESONIA (Berks Co.) — Dairy farmers are discovering that grazing may be one option in the category of lower cost dairying.

During the summer, several field days and conferences were held in many locations to focus more intensely on managing a grazing operation for productivity and profit.

One such field day was held at Forrest Stricker's farm near Robesonia. Clyde Myers, extension agent, spoke about some of the research on determing dry matter uptake from grazing.

Stricker maintains about 60 milking Holsteins on about 50 acres of permanent pasture. The farm has just started seasonal calving. In several areas, Stricker grows a mixture of grasses for the cows, including alfalfa, orchardgrass, puna chicory, and fescues.

The advantages for a low-input production include cost savings as a result of using intensive grazing. The seasonal dairying takes advantage of the spring flush for the grass mixtures. And grazing eliminates the use of expensive harvest equipment, including costly repair and maintenance.

Years ago, Stricker sold most of the big equipment common to many dairies and switched to complete grazing and forage production. Gone are the big, expensive tractors and the high-investment equipment and machinery, according to Myers. In place is hay cutting equipment to cut forages for winter storage and feeding.

At the Stricker farm, Myers was using a pasture plate measure to take readings from 30 different sites on pasture height and density. The grass was measured before the cows began grazing and after it was grazed. The readings determine how much dry matter was consumed by the number of cows.

A general rule, according to Myers, is that for every inch of pasture growth per acre, 430 pounds of dry matter is consumed. In one field, alfalfa was seeded eight years ago and still thrives. In other fields, a mixture of alfalfa/orchargrass and several other grasses were used.

A simple rule of thumb, if using a yardstick, is that for every 1 inch of growth, about 300 pounds of dry matter per acre are consumed by the cows. The pasture plate that Myers used is more accurately calibrated to take into account forage density.

While grazing will not necessarily provide the highest milk production, the cost savings alone could provide the difference in farm profitability.

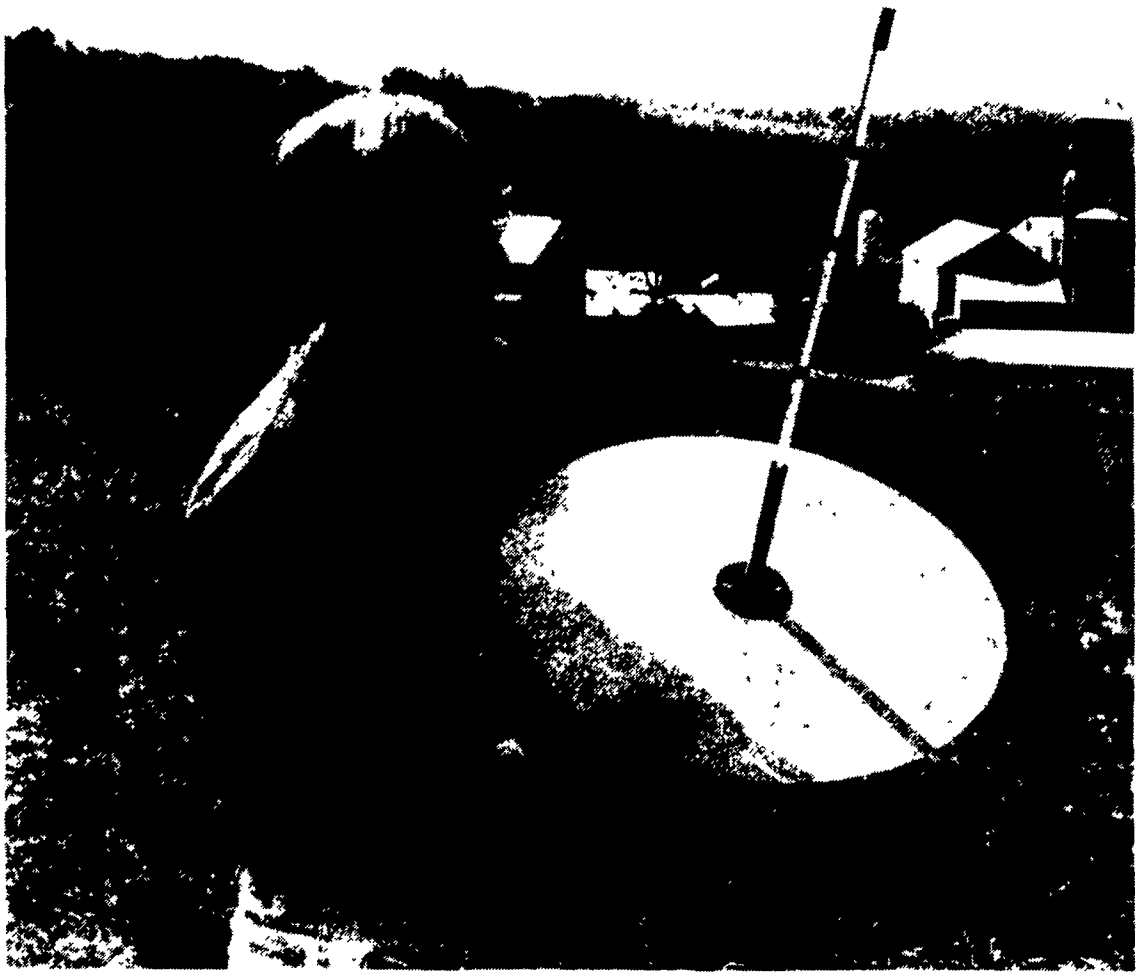
Myers also took readings at a farm owned by Harold Miller in Richland.

Miller has been grazing a couple of years and wants to learn how to more effectively make use of pastures.

Miller manages 80 cows, including one Jersey, one Brown Swiss, and one Milking Shorthorn. He manages about 200 acres of pastureland for about 250 total head of cattle.

On the home farm, about 45 acres are in intensive grazing. Milk production on the farm is about 17,800 pounds per cow per year.

What Myers learned by the farm visits is that, to maintain grazing land, graziers should move cows onto the grass when it reaches about 10 inches in plant heighth. Cows should be monitored to ensure that the grass is not eaten down lower than three inches, so the paddock area can recover.



At the Stricker farm, Clyde Myers, Berks extension agent, was using a pasture plate measure to take readings from 30 different sites on pasture height and density. The grass was measured before the cows began grazing and after it was grazed. The readings determine how much dry matter was consumed by the number of cows.

Survey To Look At Dairying

out to visitors in the dairy and livestock tent.

According to O'Connor, the survey will determine which of four categories your dairy farm will fit into in the next century.

Those categories include:

1. Low-input dairies. These include farms who are looking toward profits with least-cost inputs, regardless of herd size. This category may range from grazing to low or medium capitalization farming.

2. Expansion dairies. This would include orderly expansion from a 5 percent increase in cow numbers each year to doubling the herd in one year.

3. Specialized dairies. These include farms that generate a significant portion of the income from a specialized activity, such as raising dairy replacements, feed preparation and delivery, or milking cows only.

4. Orderly transition out of the dairy industry because of retirement, change in lifestyle, health problems, poor profitability, urban pressures, and numerous other factors.

Questions will focus on the type of operation, herd size, and plans for the dairy.

Penn State is conducting the survey as a basis for planning meetings that will become more specialized. Instead of the standard "everything for everybody" county dairy days of the past, the meetings will focus more precisely on topics unique to each category.

For more information on the survey at Ag Progress, contact Mike O'Connor at Penn State, (814) 863-3913.

Brown Swiss Named York 4-H Surpreme Champion

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — After two years of finishing in the reserve spot, the winning four-year-old Brown Swiss, "Lake Lane Pebbles" got the nod for the York 4-H Dairy Roundup's Supreme Champion.

In his announcement of the Supreme title winner, Judge Creedin Cornman, Carlisle, cited her tremendous dairy character as one of the reasons she topped his selections.

Pebbles is one of about a dozen cattle in the showstring of 15-year-old Delta 4-H'er Joshua Hushon. The Victory Acres Jubilation Emory daughter is scored EX-91, with a 93-udder, on her third classification and projected to 22,000 pounds of milk for her second lactation. A veteran of the show circuit, Pebbles claimed a national honor last November when she was named breed champion of the North American International Livestock Exposition's junior show.

The Supreme selection highlighted the day-long roundup at the York Fairgrounds on July 30, with more than 100 entries participating in the county's annual 4-H dairy project wrapup.

In Aryshire judging, Stephanie Pomraning, Delta, took senior and grand champion honors with her junior three-year-old Anchor-Mere T. Alta. Reserve senior and grand champion was the senior two-year-old exhibited by Jason Stambaugh, East Berlin. Junior honors went to Susan Richardson, Fawn Grove, whose spring calf was selected as the heifer champion, over the reserve spring yearling exhibited by Jesse Stambaugh, East Berlin. Best bred and owned was Triple J Value Julie, a four-year-old owned by Jason Stambaugh.

Brown Swiss reserve senior and grand champion honors went to Joshua Hushon, Delta, with Brothers Three Nutty Buddy, a senior two-year-old also named best bred and owned. Hushon also exhibited the junior champion, while reserve junior champion and reserve best bred and owned honors went to Kelly Jo Myers, Thomasville, with a winter yearling.

Topping the large Holstein competition was Dixie Lynn Doll, Glen Rock, with her senior and grand champion Dar-Dale Fancy

Holstein heifer honors were split by rookie exhibitor Cory Thompson, Wellsville, with his junior champion spring yearling, while reserve honors went to the winter yearling exhibited by Amy Trimmer, East Berlin. Best bred and owned Holstein was Dar-Dale Russ Emily, owned by Daphne Doll, Glen Rock.

Crop Day Draws More Than 100

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — "With the amount of moisture we've seen this year, you could plant corn in 10-inch rows and get good yield response," said John Bray, sales representative for Reading Bone Agway in Millardsville, Lebanon County.

Bray, along with many other Agway representatives, spoke Wednesday during a tour of the Agway Research Center at the Milton Hershey School Farm.

While hot, dry weather kept many on the fields cutting hay, of the 200 who registered by phone, more than 100 producers and agri-industry representatives attended the annual crop day at Hershey School.

Along with Bray, John Moser, also a sales representative for Reading Bone Agway in Millardsville, spoke about some of the conventional corn compared to narrow row corn trials. Comparisons between minimum till versus no-till were also made.

On the conventional plots, corn was planted April 24 in 30- inch rows at 27,000 plants per acre into soybean stubble. In comparison, the same day, on 15-inch rows, corn was planted at 29,000 per acre, with good standability because of good growing conditions. Both crops have corn stalks measuring 10 feet tall.

Regarding narrow row corn uses, according to Moser, "I can see using it for silage — there's a little bit of advantage," he said. "But I don't see it for grain corn." The narrow-row corn had about 140 units of nitrogen applied on soil that is "terrific," according to Bray. Response to soil additives such as sulphur has also been good on the Hershey School soils that test high for phosphorous and potassium.

Overall growing conditions for most crops has been good in the fields compared to last year, when fields were "bone dry, like everywhere else," Moser said.

The no-till narrow corn was Agway 657, a 109-day variety.

Soybean trials were also a major portion of the crop day tours. Agway APK 403 beans were planted May 19, drilled into 14-inch rows. Early beans were planted at 200,000 plants per acre.

"Beans need their space," said Matt Grajewski, territorial seed manager for Agway southeast region. Grajewski said earlier variety beans don't do well under higher populations at 7-inch rows.

In variety comparison trials, APK 401 had better standability than 403. In the coming years, new varieties APK 392 and 395 will replace the old. In addition, a bush variety of bean, APK 364 with good standability, continues to be Agway's best-selling bean, according to Grajewski.

Also, growers examined APK 386 STS varieties, in addition to the short-season APK 364 and long-season APK 399 Roundup Ready varieties. Grajewski cautioned growers to know where their beans are, because Roundup spread on beans not Roundup Ready is deadly.

Growers also looked to "the queen of forages" in Agway's Excaliber II variety alfalfa. In addition, seed depth, weed screen, and insecticide and inoculant use by a variety of manufacturers in addition to a global positioning system (GPS) demonstration, forage varieties and preservatives, and a Messicks Farm Equipment Demo rounded out the day.

"The focus of the day is on applied technology — what the research stations can do with the material in commercial plots to help customers with the selection process," said Roy Aber, sales manager for Agway Agricultural Products. This is the third year for the crop day.

John Moser, background, left and John Bray, standing next to him in the white shirt, spoke to more than 100 producers and agri-industry representatives about narrow row corn at the Agway Crop Day on Wednesday.

In the junior-age division, Kyle Fleener, of Robesonia, was the overall outstanding individual, while Ann Leed, of Lebanon was the highest ranking individual in the senior-age division.

For Fleener, the honors capped a strong week with his showing the grand champion steer of the Lebanon Area Fair, as well as the reserve grand champion market lamb.

The livestock judging competition involves individual and team efforts in judging market lambs, beef and hogs. Complete final results were not available from competition organizers.

Locomotive Stops At Cherry-Crest Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — Jack and Donna Coleman have a little piece of paradise in Lancaster County and they aim to keep it that way.

"This township has some of the best land in the county," said Coleman, who spearheaded a movement to have 5,000 acres in his township designated for an ag security area only to have township supervisors reject the proposal.

"We have got to stick up for our way of life," Coleman tells farmers. "What happened in New Jersey can happen here. People move in from the city and bring their city ideas with them. They come up with ordinances against smells and noise."

Coleman isn't merely reciting information that he read about. He's lived it. He knows how it feels to be "legislated" off the family farm. He was a New Jersey crop farmer.

"Twenty-five years ago when my wife and I bought 130 acres, we thought we'd be there forever. But things change fast," Coleman said of the land they needed to sell because new ordinances prevented them from farming.

"People don't know it, but New Jersey had some of the best land around for farming. Now, that's all in developement. The township supervisors think that can't happen here, but it can," Coleman said.

The Colemans have come up with a novel idea to save their farmland. They have built a maze that they hope will attract thousands to their farm.

That sounds a bit too commercial for someone who wants to keep farm land in agriculture, but when Coleman explains it, the concept makes sense.

The Coleman's use a 10-acre plot on which a corn puzzle maze in the shape of a locomotive was cut. Two miles of mind-bending paths have been cut through 10-foot high corn. Players riding this corn-fusing rail must find their way to the center of the boiler on the front of the engine. As players wind their way through the rails, they pick up clues.

The trails are also embellished with an assortment of theatrical devices such as two-way communications, lookout towers, secret color clues, bridges, railroad-themed quizzes and symphonic music to help maze-fans take the right turns and left twists through the pedestrian puzzle.

Interspersed among the theatrics, kernels of knowledge about agriculture are thrown out: Did you know that there are 3,500 different uses for corn? That corn is used in windshield washer fluid? That plastic utensils are made from them? Samples of corn candy are also available.

A display table reveals many of these uses. Especially important to Coleman is information about ethanol.

"People need to be educated about its use. Corn is a renewable resource and a logical use for ethanol," said Coleman, who is frustrated that chemical companies fight its use.

People bombard the Colemans and 20 employees with questions.

"How did you grow your corn so tall?" one visitor asked.

"It's all natural," Donna responds. "Cow manure and great soil!"

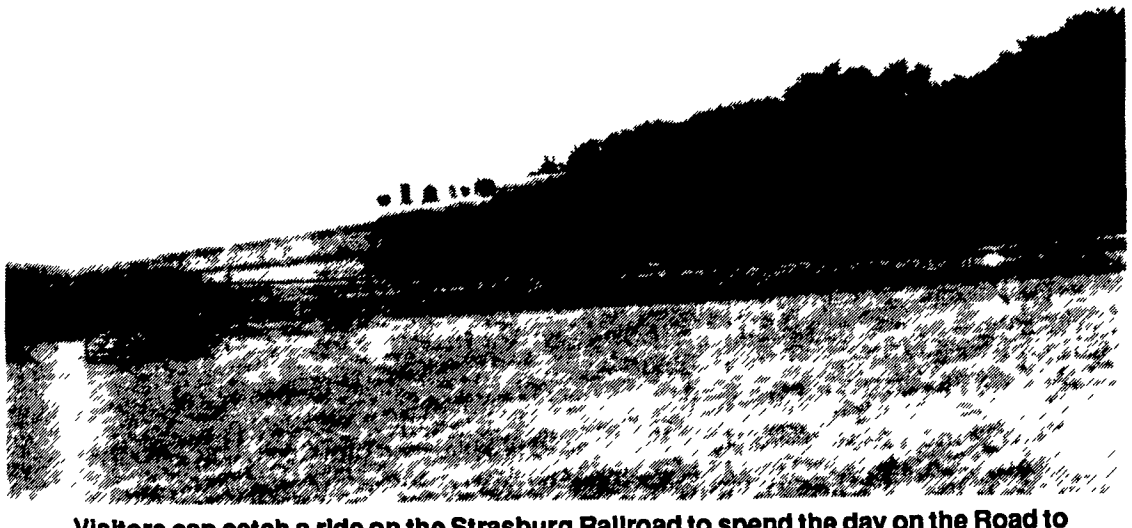
(Turn to Page B16)

Cherry-Crest Dairy Farm in Paradise is gaining national recognition for its corn maze, but long before that the Colemans have been running a successful dairy farm operation and won state and national awards for corn production. From left are herdsman Fred Ranck, Jack and Donna Coleman with son Jared, and daughter Sherri Groff with daughter Shelby.

Although only 21 months old, Jared is an uncle to Shelby who is 2 years old. Both enjoy the calves raised on the farm.

The Colemans added an addition to their home so that daughter Sherri married to Brian Groff can live on the farm and help out with milking duties.



Visitors can catch a ride on the Strasburg Railroad to spend the day on the Road to Paradise-Lost at the Amazing Maize Maze which borders the tracks.

Best Picks For Canning And Pickling

The time is ripe for canning and pickling. For perfect canning and pickling results, the following information is from the Heinz Successful Pickling Guide.

• Always pick fruits and vegetables at their peak of freshness and be sure to use a high-grade, quality vinegar of 5 percent acidity.

• Use only standard jars made for canning and metal, self-sealing lids with screwbands. Always use new lids as used lids will not seal properly.

• Be sure jars are free of nicks, chips or cracks.

• Wash jars, rinse well, and keep in hot water until ready to fill.

• Pour boiling water over lids and leave for at least 3 minutes or until ready to use. Do not boil lids as this can soften sealant and cause seal to fail.

Packing

• Pack clean, hot jars according to recipe directions. Make sure that pickling liquid fills in and around ingredients.

• Release air bubbles by running a nonmetal spatula down inside jar. Add more boiling pickling liquid if needed.

• Wipe top of jar with clean, damp cloth or paper towel to remove any food or spills.

• Center hot lid on jar with sealing compound next to jar top. Screw band firmly without forcing. A too-tight band will not allow air to escape during processing. A too-loose band will result in low vacuum and poor seal.

• A boiling water canner is recommended by USDA for processing pickles and relishes. Processing helps destroy bacteria, molds, yeast and enzymes which cause food to spoil.

Processing

• Partially fill canner and bring to simmer. Place jars in rack and lower into canner or place jars directly into rack in canner.

• Turn heat up until water comes to full boil. Cover. Lower heat to maintain gentle boil and begin timing. Water should cover jars by 2 inches. Add more boiling water if necessary.

• At the end of the processing time, carefully remove jars from water with jar lifter. For safety's sake, lift jars at shoulders, rather than by lids.

• Place jars on rack or thick dry towel and let cool, without moving, for 12 to 24 hours. Seal usually makes a pop sound when cooling. Do not retighten lids after processing. Remove rings when jars are cool.

• Check the seal. Lid should curve down slightly in center and should not press down or pop back when pressed. Lid will make a clear ringing sound when tapped with a spoon.

• If jar has not sealed, food can be reprocessed within 24 hours.

Common Pickle Problems

Soft:

• Use of slicing rather than pickling cucumbers.

• Cucumbers too mature or yellow.

• Not removing blossom and stem end.

Slippery:

• Vinegar solution too weak.

• Insufficient heat to destroy the micro-organisms. Do not start counting processing time until water returns to boil.

Shriveled:

• Too much time between harvesting and pickling.

• To much salt, sugar, or vinegar at start of pickling process.

• Vinegar solution too strong.

Hollow:

• Over-mature cucumbers or faulty growth. If cucumbers float during washing, use for relish or chunk style pickles.

Dark:

• Minerals in water, especially iron.

• Using iodized salt.

• Cooking too long with spices.

• Use of ground spices.

Featured Recipe

Dairy Management, Inc. (DMI) continues to work to increase consumer demand for dairy products. Recently DMI hosted a booth at the Institute of Food Technolgists to show dairy research in food science and nutrition.

Ten chefs who participated in the cheese recipe competition were selected at Premier Chefs of America.

National "Entertaining With Cheese," spokesperson Barbara Smith, a New York restaurateur, completed a seven-city media tour to highlight the wonderful attributes of cheese to millions of consumers through television, radio, and newspapers. She also authored a recipe leaflet. Here is a recipe from the leaflet. If you would like the colorful leaflet, which includes nine cheese recipes that will make a party special, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to American Dairy Association, 10255 W. Higgins Rd., Suite 900, Rosemont, IL 60018-5616.

SPICY VEGETABLE CORNBREAD

2 cups yellow cornmeal
1 cup all-purpose flour
1½ tablespoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons dark brown sugar
3 large eggs
1⅓ cups milk
½ cup unsalted butter, melted
1 cup sweet corn kernels
1 cup shredded Colby cheese
½ cup carrots, finely chopped
½ cup grated onion
¼ cup seeded fresh jalapeno peppers, finely chopped

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Grease a 10-inch cast-iron skillet or muffin tin. In a large bowl, stir together cornmeal, flour, baking powder, salt, and brown sugar. Whisk eggs, milk, and melted butter in a medium-size bowl and stir into dry ingredients. Add corn, cheese, carrots, onion, and jalapeno peppers. Stir until thoroughly combined. Pour batter into skillet and bake for 30 to 35 minutes, until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Cut into pieces and serve from skillet. Makes 8 large pieces. Or bake in 12 muffin tins.

GREEN TOMATO PRESERVES

5 pounds green tomatoes, cored, peeled, and finely chopped
4 pounds granulated sugar
2 lemons, unpeeled, sliced thin

In a large stainless steel or porcelain bowl, combine the tomatoes and sugar, mix thoroughly. Loosely cover and let stand overnight.

In a large stainless steel or enameled pot, drain the liquid from the tomatoes and boil until thick. Add the tomatoes and lemon slices and cook until thick and clear.

Fill hot, sterilized jars with tomato mixture, leaving ¼-inch headspace and seal. Yields: 6 pints.

So you'd like to farm, huh?

Despite the known realities that farmers are rarely bored with excess spare time or how to spend their income over their outgo, there are lots of folks who nevertheless would like to farm if they could break away from their present careers and go into the production agriculture business fulltime.

Grain-growing takes a lot of acreage and equipment investment. Livestock production — at least in our part of the country — requires considerable investment in housing, equipment, and feed storage facilities.

Orchards take years of tending before the first apple or peach or cherry can be picked. Strawberries, raspberries, blueberries are quicker, but with a very short window of harvest, as are most vegetable crops. And, as we are well aware this year, a stretch of rainy weather can almost wash out fruits and vegetables overnight.

So what to start farming? In recent years, we hear more and more about exotic agricultural enterprises. Buffalo were popular for awhile, as were llamas and alpacas. One area farm maintains a herd of red deer for the venison and antler markets. And ostrich or emu raising is bounding in popularity.

A friend in Minnesota cultivates several acres of ginseng, the medicinal herb popular in the Orient. Consider that one ounce of dried ginseng root is worth several hunderd dollars. Also consider that it takes about three or four years after planting until the root can be harvested, about $10,000 per acre investment, artificial shade over every square foot of this forest-dwelling plant and drying equipment and facilities.

This year, we've regenerated a kind of livestock on the farm that became rare in recent summers. Frogs.

For years, frogs were part of the cross-section of waterlife that populated our pond. We had tiny peepers that filled the early spring nights with their bird-like songs and a herd of giant bullfrogs that would stake out their territories at regular intervals along the pond bank. If you happened to be at the pond as the summer sun was setting in late evening, the glow from the western skies would highlight the bullfrogs balloon-like throats as they began their evening serenades.

Then, an inbalance of nature occurred.

A couple of our barn cats developed a taste for fresh frog legs. In fact, for a year or two, the four-legged front hunters kept a narrow path worn around the pond, through the thick cover of grass and cattails surrounding it. So, for a summer or two, we've missed the frogs' choir harmonizing through the fading evenings.

Our amphibian-stalking felines have since croaked of old age, allowing a rebirth of the colony of frogs in the meadow pasture pond. A chorus of "ribbits" and "garumps" again echos through the open windows on these mellow August evenings.

But, just like our other four-legged livestock, there are always a few not content within their "pasture." I nearly mowed over one in the back yard recently, where endless rain was creating borderline wetlands. Only by stomping the brake and yanking the mower blade disengage-lever did I avoid imminent frog slaughter.

Frog farming might be an interesting type of livestock production.

Installing a fence to keep them where they belong yard might be another story.

MooKooler Transform Milk Image

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Transforming milk's image from traditional to innovative is no small task within today's highly competitive food industry. Moo Kooler, a 2% line of flavored fresh milk beverages being manufactured and marketed by Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI) under license from the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East (ADADC Mid East), is taking bold strides towards that transformation.

MMI and ADADC Mid East recently earned the 1996 New Product Innovators Award for introducing Moo Kooler into the market place. The award, annually sponsored by Refrigerated & Frozen Foods magazine, recognizes only six U.S. food processors for developing the industry's top new product front-runners in dinners and entrees; meat, poultry and seafood; dairy; snacks and appetizers; bakery; and fruit and vegetables. Moo Kooler earned the innovator's distinction in the dairy category.

"We're excited. This is a very important benchmark for the Moo Kooler product line," says Don Schriver, executive vice president and chief executive officer of MMI, a top dairy cooperative and food company based in Strongsville, Ohio. "Ultimately, the product's success will be judged by consumer and distributor acceptance and dairy case sales. But, in the meantime, it's very encouraging to be recognized within the processing industry for product innovation."

Selected as its "pick to click" in the dairy case, Refrigerated & Frozen Foods praised Moo Kooler for its unique 12-ounce, screw-top plastic bottles and its full-scale Leo Burnett-produced advertising and promotion campaign: "Fluid milk processors constantly talk about competing in the larger beverage market. Here's a product line developed and positioned to do just that."

Currently manufactured at MMI's Dairy Farm Products — New Bremen, Ohio plant, Moo Kooler is rolling off the production line to major markets in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Targeted for kids ages 4 to 12, product varieties include VanillaZilla (vanilla), ChocoKool (chocolate mint), OrangeSlide (orange vanilla), ChocoBoom (chocolate fudge) and ClassiCow (plain 2% milk).

"The U.S. food business is extremely competitive. The award tells us Moo Kooler is on the right track towards giving children and adults a viable milk-beverage option and fluid milk a fresh, new lease on life," says Schriver.

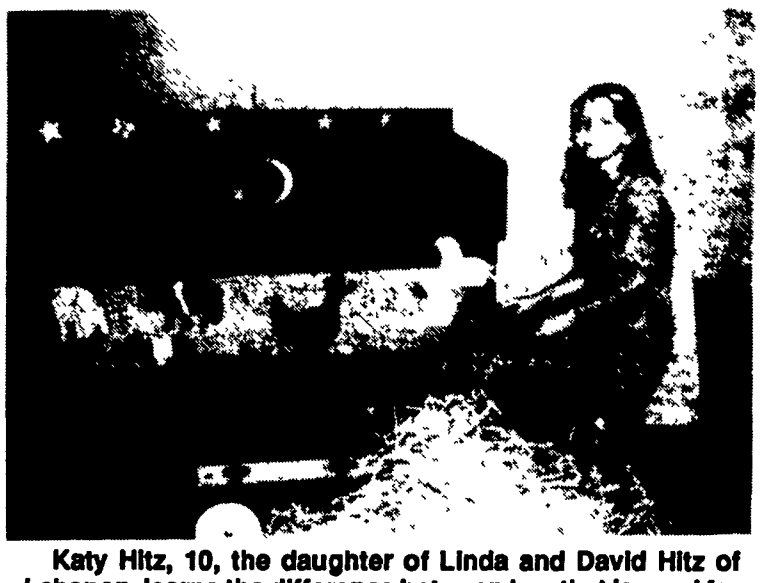
Children Learn About Agriculture and Wildlife At Lebanon

Two-year-old Stefan, son of Julie and Tim Heitz of Fredericksburg, learns how farmers harvest food by collecting eggs, apples, and potatoes in a basket and taking the produce to market.

Pat McCann from ZooAmerica North American Wildlife Park shows Renee Bomberger, 11, a sparrow hawk. ZooAmerica had a display for children at the Lebanon Area Fair to teach them about preserving wildlife.



Katy Hitz, 10, the daughter of Linda and David Hitz of Lebanon, learns the difference between hay that is used for feed and straw that is used for bedding. Here she separates the miniature bales by placing them in the designated wagons.

The children of Lebanon dairy farmers, Linda and David Bomberger, Rachel, 9, and Tommy, 7, with Mark Brandt, 4, enjoy the fair. The Bomberger children are 4-H'ers who entered projects in the fair and received numerous ribbons for their efforts.

Michelle Campbell, 9, a 4-H'er from Annville, rides a horse through a maze. The activity corner for kids was supervised by volunteers who are parents of 4-H'ers.

ANSWER — Here's another recipe for quick cinnamon buns sent in by Hilda Blatt, Jonestown.

Quick Cinnamon Sticky Buns

1 can refrigerated biscuits

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in 8- or 9-inch pan in oven. Stir in:

¼ cup brown sugar
¼ cup light or dark corn syrup
¼ cup chopped nuts
¼ cup raisins
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Place biscuits on top. Bake at 400 degrees about 15 minutes or until browned. Let stand 5 minutes before inverting onto plate. Delicious when served warm. Raisins and nuts optional.

ANSWER — Joanne Stauffer, Myerstown, wanted a recipe for jelly made with little or no sugar. A reader wrote that Weis Markets sells a fruit pectin that needs no sugar. Recipes by Ball are included inside the package. Also, Mrs. W. Martin, Lebanon, writes that a product named Dutch Jell Lite is used to make jelly with or without sugar. It is available at Dutch Way Farm Markets. A recipe pamphlet is also available. Also Mrs. Wages Lite Home-Jell with instructions for using a sugar substitute is available at grocery stores.

ANSWER — Sue McKinsey, Windsor, writes that cooking for farm hands can be a real challenge. She sends the following recipes.

Hamburg Rotini Jumble

1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 large can tomatoes
1 cup spiral macaroni, uncooked
Dash red pepper
Several slices cheese
Water, if necessary

Brown ground beef and onions. Add tomatoes, macaroni, salt, and pepper to taste. Add water if necessary. Cover and simmer about 30 minutes until macaroni is done. Place cheese slices on top and cover. Remove from heat and let stand until cheese melts.

Boiled Cherry Pudding

2 eggs beaten
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 cup sour cherries
3 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder

Beat first five ingredients together, adding cherries last. Add flour and baking powder.

Pour into 8x15-inch cheese cloth bag and tie, leaving enough room for pudding to rise. Drop in kettle of boiling water and boil for one hour. Serve hot with milk.

Blueberry Delite

Crust:
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup butter

Mix and spread in bottom of 13x9-inch pan. May need to press in with fingers dipped in flour to get crust evenly to corners of pan. Bake 20-25 minutes at 350 degrees. Cool at least one hour before adding filling.

Filling:
2 cups whipped cream topping
8 ounces cream cheese
1 cup confectioners' sugar

Mix confectioners' sugar and cream cheese together. Fold into whipped topping. Top baked crust with filling. Chill. Spread 1 can blueberry pie filling over this and chill. Spread whipped topping over all and chill until serving. Spreads easier if each layer is chilled before spreading next layer.

Response Ability For Medical Clients

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Special Care of Lancaster/York is expanding its services to include Response Ability, a personal emergency response system, to its clients, and to residents of Lancaster and York counties.

Special Care currently provides professional caregivers who assist post-hospital patients, older adults, and those with disabilities with in-home personal care, according to Scott Knoll, Special Care director.

"We know we can't be with every client 24 hours a day, but we still want to be assured that they receive the proper medical attention in the event of an emergency," he continues, "The Response Ability system provides that service."

When the client needs emergency help, he or she presses a button on a pendant worn around the neck, or on the wrist. This sends a distress signal through telephone lines to the National Emergency Response Center and the proper authorities as well as family are contacted immediately.

With Response Ability, if the person cannot reach the telephone or is too weak to call for help, he or she can still get the proper medical attention.

"The Response Ability system gives our clients the security and peace of mind they need to remain independent," according to Knoll. "Our primary mission is to improve their quality of life and the Response Ability system is one more way to help."

Families: Tune Out TV Violence

NEWARK, Del. — From the ages of 3 to 12, the average U.S. child witnesses 8,000 depictions of murder and 100,000 acts of violence, all while ensconced in the presumed safety and security of home.

The barrage of violence comes from the four hours a day — day after day, year after year — that the typical American kid spends in front of the TV set, according to the National Association for Family & Community Education (NAFCE).

The results of this steady diet of violent TV?

Children become desensitized to the effects of violence and tend to favor using aggression to resolve conflicts, claims research from the NAFCE.

"Parents need to be more aware of what their children are watching and help them make better viewing choices," said Candy Hudson, president of the Delaware Association for Family & Community Education (FCE). Delaware FCE, a volunteer organization dedicated to strengthening families and communities through education, leadership and action, receives advisement and training from University of Delaware Cooperative Extension.

"Television can be beneficial if used wisely," said Hudson. "It is up to us, as adults, to help children discover the wonders of television instead of being influenced by senseless violence and other potentially harmful programming."

Delaware FCE is doing its part to raise awareness of the impact of television. Throughout the spring, members canvassed families, friends and fellow Delawareans, asking them to pledge to avoid violent television programming on April 5, "Tune Out Violence Day."

In Washington, D.C., representatives from the national assocaition met with First Lady Hilary Rodham Clinton and Vice-President and Mrs. Gore for a briefing session. They brought with them more than 60,000 pledges collected nationwide.

Here in Delaware, Hudson and other Delaware FCE leaders joined Gov. Tom Carper for a discussion of the issues and signing of a "Tune Out TV Violence" proclamation. A similar proclamation was signed by Sussex County Council.

And Delaware FCE's efforts to combat violent television didn't end April 5. All year long, Delaware FCE participates in a national effort called "Family Choice TV," says Hudson. The scope of the campaign is far-ranging — members voice their concerns to local broadcasters and the Federal Communications Commission, contact sponsors of programs, and promote positive alternatives to violent television.

"All TV is educational ... it's just a matter of what you're learning," said Hudson. "Our goal is to encourage parents to monitor their children's viewing and help them make better choices."

Turn TV Into Teaching Tool

The Delaware Association for Family & Community Education (FCE) works to make parents aware of the impact of television on children. Here are tips from Delaware FCE on how to make TV a positive influence on your own kids:

- Be a good role model in the types of programming you choose to watch.
- Monitor your children's television choices.
- Watch programs with your children and talk about topics raised.
- Make a viewing calendar to list the best upcoming programs.
- Videotape the most interesting programs to allow for repeat viewing.
- Look for high-quality children's book-video combinations in lieu of TV viewing.
- Exchange tips with other parents on appropriate children's programs.

Apple Cider Sauce

2 cups apple cider

Parfaits Debut At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — For the first year, ice cream parfaits will be offered during Ag Progress Days.

Visitors will have a choice between strawberry parfaits made with fresh berries or vanilla ice cream topped with chocolate syrup, whipped cream, and a cherry. Each sundae will be served in a clear plastic parfait glass with long spoon.

The parfait booth will be housed in the Allied Milk Producers trailer, which is a little red barn trailer. It is located in Booth #13 at the corner of West 8th Street and Main Street.

Jan Harding, director for Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Promotion Services (PDPPS), said that the parfait booth will be manned by members of county dairy promotion committees.

"In an effort to help the local county dairy promotion groups earn money for local activities, PDPPS has arranged to operate an ice cream sundae stand during Ag Progress Days," Harding said.

Although PDPPS will coordinate the booth activities, all profits will go to county committees.

Ice cream will be purchased from Heritage House in Bloomsburg.

Held this year on August 13-15, Ag Progress Days features the latest agricultural research and technology.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Our house is quiet this morning as our houseguests have gone home to Virginia. The boys enjoyed playing with their cousins on the farm. They didn't have enough bicycles for everyone so some had to use tricycles.

At night they asked for jars to put fireflies in and even had one or more in the house. We had a Shreiner Reunion in a park in Lancaster while they were here and so our son and family got to see other relatives.

My garden is getting too weedy as we've had so much rain and not enough time to work in it. It seems that harvesting sweet corn takes precedence over the weeds. Allen has put in five separate plantings and so we can eat corn-on-the-cob all summer. We've been able to get potatoes from our three rows too and I am glad we don't need to buy any.

Another one of my braided rugs has found a new home. As the grandchildren reach 12 years of age, I have them pick one for themselves. That way they will have something to remember that their grandmother made for them. My mother collected dishes and there were enough to share with all of her daughters.

My children tell me to mark things and give the history of each piece. But, I consider that to be too big a job and so they will just have to remember what we tell them.

I just heard the clock strike and so I must type this article before the messenger comes to pick it up. So far, my old typewriter has been doing its duty. It dates back to the 1940's when it was used to publish a "Rural Youth" newsletter.

Sheep Leadline Event Teaches About Wool

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Danny VanVleet won the boys' division and Morgan Firestine won the girls' division in the recent Lebanon sheep lead line event, an educational competition held in conjunction with the Lebanon Area Fair.

Sheep lead line competitions are superficially fashion events, where contestants display handmade wool garments and lead a sheep.

Presence of those who compete, as they model their wool garment and accessory ensembles, the creativity and practicality of the ensemble, and the use of wool are considered in judging.

While the judges should already be aware of the diversity of uses for wool in clothing people, the event provides an incentive for youth to discover wool, its attributes, historic uses and possible future uses.

The familiarity of the sheep with the end product also helps provide the bond between resource and resource provider.

Morgan Firestine was named champion of the event featuring a field of seven other girls. Taking second was last year's champion Janine Winebark. Morgan's sister Margeaux Firestine was third.

There were two competitors in the boys' division, with last year's champion, Brandon Winebark taking second place.

Danny VanVleet holds his champion plaque award of the boys' division in the Lebanon Area Fair sheep lead line competition.

Ironing Out Wrinkles On Linen

Linen is known both for its crisp, smooth finish as well as its tendency to wrinkle easily. Although the industry has made great efforts to market the "wrinkle look" of linen garments, most consumers still prefer their clothes to have a pressed, wrinkle free look.

For this reason, manufacturers are producing lenen with blends of other fibers to help make it more wrinkle-resistant. These blends allow the linen to retain its crispness but also make it softer and more comfortable to wear.

Manufacturers are also turning to the use of finishes and sizings on their linen garments, which adds body, reduces wrinkling, and gives the linen a greater depth of color.

need to use cow manure on their fields.

The Colemans farm 160 acres, which are all contoured strips. Because the maze field is a no-till field, it can rain an inch the night before and still be open for business the next day.

"It's important that municipalities allow farmers to do things like this," Coleman said. "Farmers need off-farm income."

Coleman went before the zoning hearing board to receive permission to open the maze.

While hesitant, the board allowed him to open the maze with certain restrictions — select times and no permanent buildings.

Visitors from England, Australia, and across the U.S. like to buy T-shirts commemorating the Amazing Maize Maze.

Agricultural and tourism are the biggest industries in the county. The Colemans combine both in an effort to educate the public about farming. By attracting crowds to the Amazing Maize Maze cut into the cornfield, the Colemans are able to reach the non-farming community with a farming message.

Nine-year-old Matt Strauss led his dad and brother Michael through the maze in 23 minutes. They picked up only four pieces of the 16 clues to find their way. It's reported that kids seem more adept at finding their way than adults.

While the Colemans lived in New Jersey, they crop farmed. When they moved to Paradise, the Colemans switched to a dairy operation.

"People are surprised that we made that unusual switch," Coleman said. "But we did it for several reasons. One is the children always had 4-H dairy projects. They were excited about using their animals. We wanted to work as a family. In New Jersey I'd be out in the fields all day. Here, we could work together."

Anticipating mistakes, the Colemans started slow with only 13 cows. Within a year, they increased to 40 and now have 125 head of registered Holsteins.

After 10 years, the children are grown but continue to help part-time on the farm. Donna helps her husband with morning milkings and every other weekend.

Black Bear structures set up several moveable structures in which refreshments and T-shirts are sold. Picnic tables and gazebos are available for those who want to relax after conquering the maze. A petting zoo and and several kiddy mazes are set up for children.

Some folks find their way out within 20 minutes, but a substantial number wander around an hour or two in the maze.

Auction To Benefit Clinic

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — Donations of saleable items are again requested for the benefit auction for the Clinic for Special Children.

The auction will be Sept. 21 at the Leola Produce Auction site on Brethren Church Road, Leola. All proceeds will go to the clinic, a nonprofit organization with Dr. Holmes Morton as the attending physician.

Morton has taken a special interest in several hereditary diseases, and by testing all newborn babies of high-risk parentage, he has been able to prevent irreversible brain damage of many of these young children.

The same tests that are at the clinic for $35 would cost $350 to $400 at major medical centers, making these tests too expensive for many parents.

The costs of owning and operating this laboratory equipment are huge. But with the funds from this annual auction, the clinic has been able to offer this service to their clients at a price that is affordable to the average parent.

Donations can be made to the committee persons. If you have items that should be on the sale bill, you need to make contact by Tuesday, Aug. 13.

For more information, contact Leonard Hurst, Lititz. Phone: (717) 626-4863.

Side Dressing Garden Vegetables

Side-dressing is simply applying fertilizer to garden vegetables during the growth season after the plants have become established. Usually fertilizer applied at this time is placed in a band about 6-12 inches from the plants, or placed on the soil surface and carefully worked in with a light raking.

Susan J. Goldsworthy, Penn State Cooperative Extension horticulturist, recommends shaking off any dry fertilizer that gets on the foliage, and being careful not to disturb plant roots. In dry weather, water the soil to make the fertilizer available to the roots more quickly.

A side-dressing of fertilizer should only be applied if plants do not seem to be growing well or foliage is a yellow-green color. Applying extra fertilizer mid-season on a regular basis can result in excessive amounts of phosphorous and potassium in the soil. The usual rate for a side-dressing is about 1.5 to 2 of 10-10-10 or equivalent fertilizer per 100 feet of row.

Timing of side-dressing is different for different crops. Apply to leafy crops once they are well-established; sweet corn when plants are about 12" tall; tomatoes, eggplants and peppers once the first fruit have set; broccoli, cauliflower and cabbage once buds or heads have begun to form; and vine crops once the vines begin to run.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know whom to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

There's no need to send a SASE. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

In the winter, Fred has a beautiful coat, but as soon as warm weather arrives, he develops rashes, scaly skin, and sores, which are aggravated by his continual scratching and chewing of himself. Frank paid more than $600 to have blood tests to determine what allergies Fred had. Serums were made to innoculate him against these allergies. But this summer, Fred's skin is as bad as ever. If anyone has found a solution to this common complaint about Black Labs, please call Frank (who is at his wit's end) immediately at (609) 467-3560.

August Things To Do

Folklore is filled with weather predictions. Beekeepers are especially good weather forecasters. For example, the folklore "A bee was never caught in a shower" or "Bees will not swarm before a storm" tells us a swarm of bees in summer, "does little more than bring a dry."

How the 'Great and Small' gardener wants to find a swarm of dry weather this summer.

Wet weather means weeds produce plenty of seeds. Keep your garden weeded to avoid weeds going to seed. I've never seen such a good crop of purslane as this summer. I thought purslane thrived in dry weather. Wrong! It's even showing up as a tough competitor with vine crops like muskmelons and pumpkins. It's even too numerous to use in salads.

April showers may have brought May, June, and July flowers. August flowers are a rainbow of brilliant colors this year. Flowers and foliage as annuals and perennials are thriving except for our geraniums which prefer drier weather.

Treat yourself to a gardener's field day. On Thursday, August 15, at the Landisville Research Farm, you'll enjoy a day looking at a field and container trials of New Guinea impatiens, cutting and ivy geraniums, asters, cascading and cutting petunias, and other new and unusual plants.

On Friday, August 16, visit the Penn State Trial Gardens at University Park. Evaluate over 600 cultivars of annuals and perennial flowers. Registration is $10 for each day. For more information, contact your Extension office.

Late August is an excellent time to reseed and renovate your lawn. Unfortunately, sometimes correcting a problem lawn means cutting down trees, adding soil and fertilizers, using differnt grass seed and even changing your mowing habits. Pruning often eliminates the need for tree removal. Tree roots may need pruned as well. Correct drainage problems by breaking-up compacted soil or installing drainage tile. Sometimes, regarding a site corrects a surface drainage problem.

Change mowing habits by cutting lawns no shorter than 2 inches everytime you use the mower. No more than one third of the grass blade should be removed at any one time. For a list of renovation methods, contact the Extension office.

Order your spring flowering bulbs shortly. Feed your roses one more time before the end of August. Continue to spray to prevent black spot from spreading. Prune out thin and dying canes. Divide and replant peonies, bleeding heart, iris and daylily. Pinch your chrysanthemums one more time.

Lastly, lift and dispose with a flat shovel slime mold fungus growing on mulch beds. These decomposers are prevalent this summer. No chemical treatments reduce these fungi from appearing.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addressed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

VAN DALE® Dependability through Quality

Seeking Quality Child Care

Often with the beginning of a school year parents must make new child care schedules and providers must be found. If you are still looking for care for your children this fall, let me remind you of the importance of taking the necessary time to carefully select the best possible setting.

Researchers have found that the single-most important determinant of quality child care services is the provider having child-related training. We also know from longitudinal studies that there is a direct relationship between a provider's salary and the length of time he or she will stay in a position. These are two critical factors that you need to explore as you make your choices.

The more consistent the care is for a child, the better the child will fare. In fact, now innovative programs are working to keep a particular provider with a group of children from infancy through late pre-school care. This is a great idea, and it challenges some systems who "graduate" children to new caregivers, new rooms, and even new buildings every year or two.

In my work with child care providers, I have found most to be very caring individuals who often feel underappreciated and undercompensated for the crucial roles they play in children's lives. How do you interact with your children's caregivers? What messages do you send?

Having a positive parent-provider relationship is so important. Yet many parents and child care workers struggle with this area. According to Rose-Marie Smith, both parties often feel many of the same things but never think about it from the other party's point of view. They probably both feel: "I'm tired." "I want to be cared about as a valuable human being for my own sake, not just as a parent or a provider." "I wonder if I am doing OK." "I'm jealous of you."

Given the research — higher salaries being linked to consistent care and well-trained individuals being linked to quality care — are you willing to pay the price to have your children taken care of well? Surprisingly, according to Marcy Whitebook, "Child care workers are paid less per hour than animal caretakers, bartenders, and parking lot attendants. It is not surprising that so many move on to other kinds of work." This is despite their higher than average education level. Did you know, most child care providers do not receive benefits from their employer?

Labor studies reveal another grueling dimension to this work. The average child care worker lifts 9,600 pounds a day. This figure holds if he or she lifts eight 30-pound children five times each hour for eight hours.

No question. Providing excellent care for children is hard work. No question. Your children are significantly shaped by the level of care they receive, good or poor. That's why it is so important to do two things — to select your provider carefully and then to fully compensate him or her for the service provided.

To help you with the selection task, here are some questions that you can ask during an on-site visit to distinguish the quality locations from the not-so-reputable ones.

- Children love to be noisy, energetic, and dirty. Does this facility allow your child to experience those important moments of childhood?
- Are there props available to enrich dramatic play time?
- Does the provider listen to and talk with the children on their level? Does she sit on the floor and participate in the activities? Does she encourage play without controlling the activity excessively?
- Does the caregiver's approach to child rearing and developmental needs agree with yours?
- Is there room for active play and quiet play? Indoor play and outdoor play?
- Are poisons, medicines, and sharp objects stored in a locked area? Is a first-aid kit readily available? Are toys clean and in safe working condition?
- How are parents involved in the facility's program?
- Are you encouraged to visit your child during the day?
- What safety precautions are in place regarding your child's leaving the facility with other adults?
- What is the turnover rate of staff at your center? How long has this particular teacher been with this group of children? (Average turnover rate in Pennsylvania is 34 percent per year.)
- Does the provider have written policies and agreements that are discussed and signed prior to accepting a child into care?
- Is the facility registered/licensed by the Department of Public Welfare?

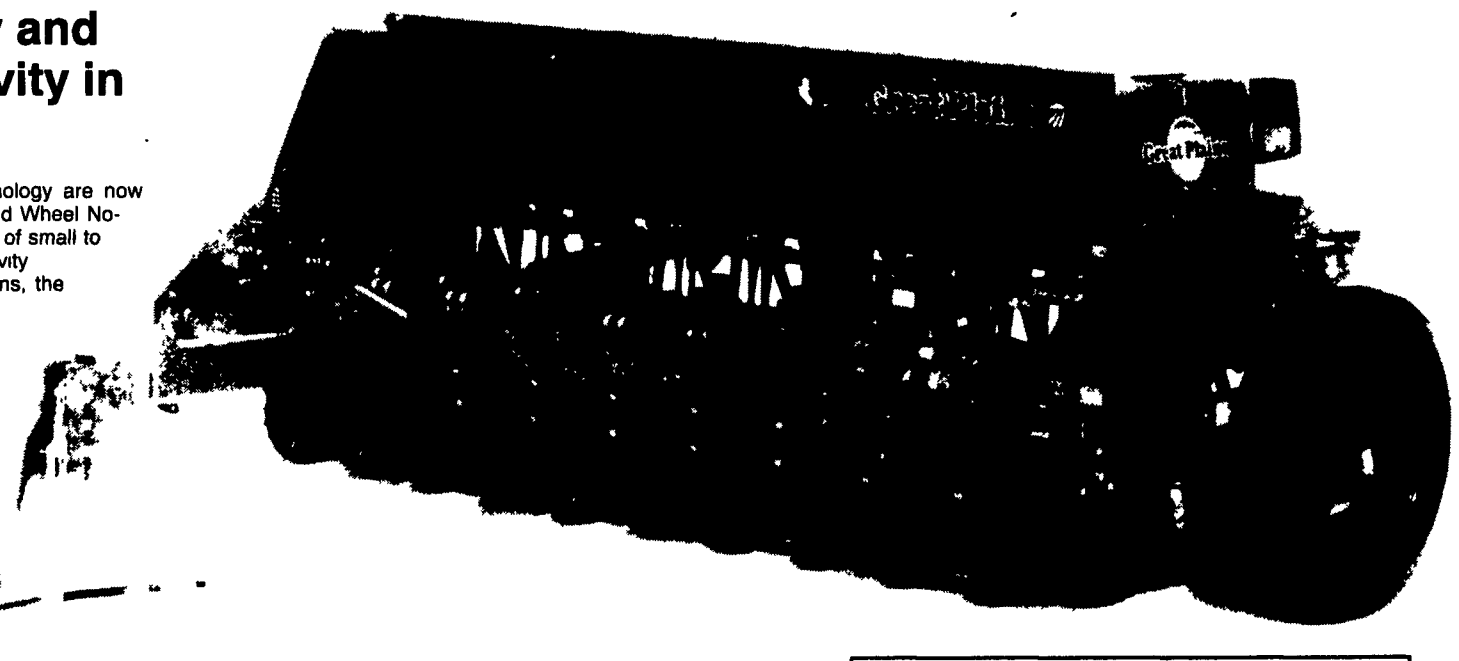
New from – Great Plains

12' End Wheel No-Till Drill

No-Till technology and maximum productivity in a 12' size



All of the benefits of Great Plains no-till technology are now available in a new 12 foot size The new 12' End Wheel No-Till drill is designed to handle the planting needs of small to medium sized operations with maximum productivity
Built to the high quality standards of Great Plains, the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill will plant in the most demanding of no-till conditions with extreme accuracy
The end wheel design makes this drill extremely maneuverable. Keeping all ground-working com-ponents in-line with the end wheels prevents openers from bulldozing or bridging when working in rolling terrain The end wheels also act as stabilizers to hold the openers steady when seeding on slopes Excess debris is no problem for this unit. Opener and coulter stagger of 10 3/4" allows trash to flow evenly and freely. No-till coulters create a mini-seedbed allowing openers to concentrate on seed placement.
Planting depth adjustments are quick and easy with the "T"-handle depth control system State of the art solid seed tubes ensure that the seed exits the chute with "zero motion drop" for ultimate seed placement accuracy The optional Seed-Lok™ wheel then presses each seed into moist soil for optimum germination.
The improved straight-arm, solid stand opener design, combined with the cushioned press wheel provides maximum down pressure with less wear and tear

The large, welded seed box holds up to 2.4 bushels per foot. Exclusive Great Plains fluted feed seed cups coupled with the 4-speed gearbox deliver outstanding accuracy in varying rates and seeding conditions
Designed with safety in mind, the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill comes equipped with transport safety lights and a wider walkboard.
Accessories available with the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill include: folding markers, coil tine harrows, seed box agitator and small seeds attachment

BASIC LAUNDRY 101 FOR COLLEGE FRESHMEN

Have you taught your "soon-to-be" college freshman everything he or she needs to know about doing laundry? If you want whites to remain white be sure to give your child a course in Basic Laundry 101 before he or she moves to college.

From a college experience I know that just one pair of brown socks can make a load of whites look like they were washed in muddy water. Even after an evening of soaking, bleaching, and using dye remover those clothes were never truly white again. Here are some laundry tips you may want to include in Basic Laundry 101.

Most college dormitories or apartments will have coin-operated laundries. If your child is not familiar with coin-operated facilities plan a hands-on trip to the local laundromat with his laundry and do a practice run. There are some basic guidelines for using these facilities. First they need the basic supplies and equipment like a laundry bag or basket, measuring cup, hangers, detergent, bleach, fabric softener if desired, and lots of quarters. Encourage your child to save pocket change for doing the laundry.

Teach them how to sort clothes into loads that can be washed according to colors, soil, bleachability, type of fabric, water temperature and wash cycle conditions. Also emphasize the importance of emptying pockets. Forgotten pens, crayons, chewing gum, tissues, lipstick, cigarettes, etc. can create havoc in the washer and dryer. Be sure to close zippers, buttons, snaps and hooks to prevent damage to other items.

During the first trip to the laundry, read any instructions on the walls and instructions on the washer and dryer. To save money they may be tempted to cram as many items as possible into the washer or dryer. Load the washer loosely, with dry, unfolded clothes, do not pack them in, as the clothes must circulate freely in the washer for thorough washing and rinsing. Overloading can cause poor cleaning, excessive lint, and extra wear on fabrics. It's best to wash articles of different sizes together to allow for best washing action.

Be sure they know about pretreating stains. I suggest buying one of the stain sticks that allows one to treat the stain when it occurs and launder it up to seven days later. A prewash spray or liquid laundry detergent can also be used following the manufacturer's directions. Caution, prewash sprays may soften fingernail polish and the nail polish may rub off on the clothes being treated.

Follow the directions on the detergent container to know how much to add. Extra detergent will be needed for heavily soiled or extra large loads while less will be needed for lightly soiled or small loads. The measured amount of detergent should be added to the partially filled washer before the clothes are added.

Bleaching is used to remove dirt and stains, keep white clothes white and provide a disinfectant action. There are two kinds of bleach — chlorine and oxygen. Liquid chlorine bleach is a powerful chemical and can eat holes in clothes unless it is diluted in four parts water and added after the washer is full and washing. Oxygen bleach such as Clorox 11 or Vivid, is safe for all fabrics. This type of bleach can be identified by label comments such as "safe for all fabrics" or "all fabric bleach." It can be added along with the detergent when loading the washer.

Fabric softener eliminates "static cling," mimimizes wrinkles, and makes clothes soft and fluffy. There are several types to select from including (1) rinse-added fabric softeners, (2) washer-added fabric softeners, and (3) dryer-added fabric softeners. Be sure to follow the manufacturer's instructions for use. Caution, too much fabric softener will reduce the absorbence of fabrics such as towels and athletic clothing.

There's more to drying clothes than putting all of the clothes into one large coin-operated dryer. A properly loaded dryer will cause less wrinkling and produce more even drying. Sort laundry into loads that will take the same drying temperatures and dry in about the same amount of time. Most fabrics today should be dried on a permanent press cycle. It is essential that garments be removed from the dryer immediately when tumbling stops or they will become wrinkled if allowed to lie in the warm dryer.

Lastly, remind the student to be courteous when using the coin-operated facilities. They should clean up any laundry products they may spill and remove the laundry from the washer or dryer as soon as the cycle is complete.

Basic Laundry 101 may eliminate the "tons" of dirty laundry coming home on weekends, but don't bet on it!

World's Old Tractors Playing With A Full Deck

You know what a John Deere is, but have you heard of a Bolinder Muntells, a Field Marshall or a Goold, Shapley & Muir? Did you know that Porsche once built tractors? And Fiat?

Or, that once upon a time a Happy Farmer tractor was built? Probably made the farmer happy if he'd been plowing with mules and bought a new Happy Farmer.

These tractors and many more are featured in a deluxe deck of playing cards, "Classic Tractors From Around the World," produced by Classic Cards & Tractor Collectibles, Rockland, Delaware.

There are 52 vintage tractors, 42 various makes from a dozen different countries. Unique and novel, the tractors are featured in color on the face of the cards, and come in an attractive double-deck box trimmed in gold, with flags of the 12 nations — ala this year's Olympic Games.

Created by John Harvey, former DuPont agricultural communications manager, this is his third edition — the first two featured U.S. tractors.

"Food, farming and tractors are universal," says Harvey. "Anyone who grew up on a farm, or anybody with rural roots, can identify with an antique tractor. Vintage tractors pluck a heartstring. A boy never forgets the first girl he ever kissed or the first tractor he ever drove."

As far as he knows, nobody ever produced playing cards featuring restored antique tractors from various countries.

"Three of the cards feature Russian tractors, sent from the Institute for Research and Development of Tractors, in Moscow. One is a Russian-built track-type tractor from 1896. That's a hundred years ago. I doubt that many people have seen this picture," says Harvey.

There are 13 U.S. tractors, 12 from England, seven from Canada, four each from Austria and Germany, three from Sweden, three from Russia, two from France, and one each from the Czech Republic, Australia, Italy and The Netherlands.

Cost of the twin-pack of cards is $15, which includes shipping and handling. Order from: Classic Cards, Box 437, Rockland, DE 19732. Or call: (302) 478-5787. This is a limited edition.

IT'S IN THE (TRACTOR) CARDS: Vintage tractors from a dozen different countries — Australia, Austria, Canada, Czech Republic, France, Germany, UK, Italy, The Netherlands, Russia, Sweden and USA — grace the faces of these playing cards. Beautifully-restored tractors appear in color with the owner's name and a factoid. The 12 flags of the countries represented appear on the gold-trimmed double-deck box. For more information, call (302) 478-5787.

Sheepberry Farms Adds Targhee Sheep

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — Targhee sheep, what's a Targhee sheep? That is the usual response Sheepberry Farms' owners, John and Lynn Zerphey receive when they tell people about the recent sheep purchase for their farm sheep flock.

These special sheep were purchased from the University of Wisconsin at Madison. The university has a renowned agricultural college with departments for sheep production and dairy sheep studies.

The Targhee sheep was developed by the U.S. Sheep Experiment station located at Dubois, Idaho, to meet the demand of the sheep industry for a sheep breed with "thick natural fleshing," high quality fine clothing-type wool, and most important, to adapt and thrive in the rugged conditions on the western range and mountains. These new sheep were bred and tested in the high mountains of the Targhee National Forest. These sheep proved to be exceptional in performance and efficiency, and the forest name, Targhee seemed the best choice to christen the new sheep breed.

To develop a new breed of livestock, established breeds are crossed and consistent selection will result to a new breed. The sheep selected to develop the Targhee were Corriedale, Lincoln (an ancient English sheep), and Rambouillet (western fine wool breed).

The Zerpheys currently raise Border Leicester sheep as their base flock. They also have several Suffolk sheep, Rambouillet and Lincoln breeds. The decision to add the Targhee rams to their flock was the result of seyeral years of evaluation of their farm plan and direction of sheep production for the future. Historically finer wools always command better prices, so the Zerpheys want to build a flock with finer wools.

The Zerpheys visited the University to see their Targhee flock and then purchased two Targhee rams and a Targhee ewe. Because the Zerpheys have a "closed" flock, the new sheep were quarantined for 30 days before turning out with the Zerpheys' other sheep. As of 1995, Pennsylvania had only 27 registered Targhee sheep.

"The Targhees are quite different than our Border Leicester sheep," notes Lynn Zerphey, "the Targhees are woolie all over from head to hoofs and are much larger and taller."

The Zerpheys plan to cross the Targhee rams with a select group of their white Border Leicester ewe, Suffolk and Rambouillet ewes, with hopes of qualiity lambs and a finer wool.

Lynn Zerphey said that the addition of Targhees to the flock of Sheepberry Farms is part of the Farms' plan to build a flock with finer wools.

Grow A Butterfly Bush

Butterfly-bush is a vigorously growing deciduous shrub which grows to a mature height of 6-8 feet. It is valued for its summer flowers which are usually lilac, and delightfully fragrant, borne in 4- to 10-inch long upright or nodding panicles. Other available colors are white, pink, orange-yellow, red, lavender, purple, and dark violet. They make a fine addition to the shrub or perennial border.

According to Susan J. Goldsworthy, Penn State Cooperative Extension horticulturist, it is better to use butterfly-bush in mass rather then as a single specimen shrub. The blooms can be used for cut-flowers but do not last long. This shrub attracts an amazing array of butterflies and bees, hence the name.

Butterfly-bush is easily transplanted, almost weedlike in its ability to survive; prefers well-drained, fertile soils; and full sun. Prune before growth ensues in spring, the more vigorous the growth the larger the flowers panicles. For more information see Manual of Woody Landscape Plants by Michael A. Dirr.

4-H Day Camp

The "Fast Food Frenzy" Day Camp '96 was quite a success!

On Wednesday, July 24, Adams County youth ages 8 to 12 enjoyed a day of crafts, recreation, aquatic studies, foods, and many other activities at the 1996 4-H Day Camp held at the South Mountain Fairgrounds near Arendtsville.

Fifty-five 4-H'ers and 19 4-H teen leaders attended Day Camp. The 4-H teens planned, organized, and led all the day's activities with the assistance of extension 4-H staff and volunteer adult leaders.

The theme of this year's Day Camp was "Fast Food Frenzy." When the 4-H'ers first registered in the morning, they were divided into five groups: McDonald's, Wendy's, Hardees, Burger King, and Arby's. Each group was supervised by two teen leaders who watched over them throughout the day camp program. These teens took the kids to the five workshops.

In the crafts workshop, everyone made a padded picture frame and received a photo of their group so they could remember day camp. Recreational activities included water balloons which were greatly appreciated on the hot day.

In the nature workshop, the kids waded into a stream and used nets to catch and identify aquatic animals.

The Adams County Beef Queen Heidi Miller, Dairy Princess Joy Hess, and the Apple Queen Krista Cline presented a foods workshop on their commodities. Each workshop was led by two 4-H teens with some assistance from adult leaders.

After the workshops, the youth participated in "Greasy Games." An obstacle course, relays, egg toss, and other Olympic activities had each group competing against each other.

After a delicious dinner of barbecue sandwiches provided by the Mt. Pleasant 4-H Club and served by club members and leaders, 4-H'ers showed their allegiance to their group at the evening program, which was called "The Flame Broil Ceremony." Each group presented mascots, a skit or a commercial, a banner, and a gift. The "Great Restaurant Foods" judged the different categories and chose a winner. The judges were four 4-H teen Senate members Heidi Miller, Jason Keller, Janel Keller and Denise Green. They dressed in a cardboard cheese burger, salad, soda and chicken nuggets.

Teen group leaders at Day Camp were Chad Funt, Chrissy Dibert, Gabby Wells, Kelly Rockafellow, Matt Linebaugh, Christi Cunningham, Bruce Baldwin, Jessi Leister, Heather Stevens and Amber Day. Teen leaders in charge of workshops were Denise Green, Janel Keller, Ashi Day, Kandice Arnold, Jason Keller and Keith Livelsberger. Volunteer leader Mandy Day helped with recreation and organized the Greasy Games. Volunteer leader Sharon Baker, as well as Extension Program Assistant Darlene Resh and Summer 4-H Program Assistant Heather Glennon, oversaw the day's activities and prevented chaos from occurring. Linda Carey, EMT, volunteered as the resident nurse for the day's event.

Be sure to watch for the next episode, Day Camp '97, coming in July 1997.

Gypsy Moth Problem

YORK (York Co.) — If you live in an area where gypsy moth have been present this spring and summer or are seeing a large number of new light brown fuzzy egg masses, the county gypsy moth coordinator is accepting applications for egg mass surveys to be done later in the summer.

There is a $15 non-refundable fee to have the egg mass survey completed, but this does not guarantee that the homeowner will get sprayed in 1997. Residences must meet the state guidelines in order to be sprayed. Each property owner must make his/her own application; one neighbor making application will not get the entire neighborhood sprayed.

If you have any questions, call Lois Rankin, county gypsy moth coordinator, at (717) 840-7408. Applications can be picked up at the York County Cooperative Extension Office, 112 Pleasant Acres Rd., York. Applications will be accepted until August 2.

UD Prof Teaches With Personal Touch

NEWARK, Del. — These days, many of us spend more time interfacing with technology — the Internet, ATMs, voice mail, video games — than interacting with people.

One almost begins to wonder if the human component, the human touch, will someday be rendered obsolete.

Then you run across a man like Carl Toensmeyer, and you realize that no educational videotape or CD-ROM program could ever impart the lessons that he has taught his students.

Ostensibly, this University of Delaware food and resource economics professor instructs students in food and fiber marketing, strategic selling and buyer communication, futures markets, food retailing, and product management. And there's no denying that Dr. T — as he is dubbed by his students — knows his subject matter well and teaches it effectively.

But this professor with the warm smile and dry wit teaches much more than just the fundamentals of food marketing. He helps a shy and awkward freshman to believe in himself. He encourages the lackadaisical and unfocused student to set goals and see the possibilities that exist. He aids a superachiever in handling the sting of losing a marketing competition and thus prepares her for the inevitable ups and downs of the work world.

Each student is an individual in Dr. T's eyes. And it is clear that he is intensely interested in the achievement of each and every student who crosses his path. Thus, it comes as no surprise that Toensmeyer was recently awarded the 1996 Excellence in Teaching Award, an honor bestowed annually on four exceptional UD teachers. Dr. T previously won this award in 1984, and he won the Excellence in Advising Award in 1989.

This self-effacing professor is reluctant to take much credit for his success in the classroom. "I own my success to all the students I have taught over the years. And my teaching philosophy — a participatory-based approach — came from two people, my college compisition instructor and my Ph.D. advisor, Jarvis Cain. These two teachers were constantly available and always took that extra step," said Toensmeyer.

Just like Dr. T does today.

On a sultry spring day in a Townsend Hall classroom where eight students have gathered for "FREC 405: Management and Leadership Development," Toensmeyer's special teaching style is readily apparent.

"How did your latest game go?" he asks one young man, a member of the university baseball team. "Are you ready for your job interview next week?" Dr. T inquiries of a young woman.

Today's lesson focuses on a management case study of an unreliable employee who later lied about his behavior. How should a mamager react to an employee like this?

Dr. T guides the students in a spirited discussion of business ethics, forcing them to offer more than just opinions and gut reactions. He gets them to look at the complexities of the issues and to support their answers with the principles of management they have learned.

When one student emphatically states that "no job is worth sacrificing your morals," Dr. T looks him in the eye and replies, "I hope you never lose that."

Former students who do run into moral quagmires on the job, or just need some business advice, know that Dr. T is only a phone call away. He keeps in touch with more than 75 alumni on a regular basis. In fact, Toensmeyer spends part of the summer driving up and down the eastern seaboard, calling on former students now employed at such companies ad Dole, Kellogg's, Fresh World, and Perdue. And he takes plenty of notes — so he can share news of the latest advances in the field with a new crop of students come September.

Toensmeyer expects there will be plenty of new freshmen to greet in the years to come.

"I've been here at UD since 1969, right after receiving my doctorate in agricultural economics from the University of Maryland," said Toensmeyer. "But I'm certainly not ready to retire yet. Each September, I walk back into the classroom with my adrenaline chared up. I can't wait to begin another school year."

Maryland Farm Queen To Be Crowned

TIMONIUM, Md. — The reigning Maryland Farm Queen, Lori Evans of Garrett County, will have the honor of crowning her successor, the 1996 Maryland Farm Queen, who will be selected at the Maryland Farm Queen Contest, Sunday, August 25, 7 p.m, in the State Fair Cow Palace.

Young women, between the ages of 16 and 19, who have earned their place in the 1996 Maryland Farm Queen Contest by winning county Farm Bureau-sponsored contests, will compete for this renowned title, tiaras supplied by Littman's Jewelers in Cranberry Mall, and scholarship and cash awards valued up to $4,000. The 23 Maryland county farm queens, will be critiqued, during a two-day competition, primarily on their agricultural knowledge and experience and their civic involvement. Each must spontaneously respond to a "fish bowl" question either related to career opportunities, agricultural or environmental stewardship issues. Poise, appearance, personality, communication skills, and civic involvement are secondary requirements.

The 1996 Maryland Farm Queen will be present throughout the run of the State Fair to award prizes, and mingle with fairgoers, dignitaries, and media representatives. Her responsibilities will continue throughout the year as she will participate in a number of activities representing Maryland agriculture. The runners-up will assist the Farm Queen with award presentations and serve as hostesses for dignitaries.

The 115th Maryland State Fair, which will offer a variety of livestock and horse shows, arts and crafts and home arts exhibits, runs from Saturday, August 24, through Monday, September 2, at the Timonium Fairgrounds in Baltimore County. Early risers are welcome to attend livestock and horse shows at 8:00 a.m. Demonstration halls are open from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. The Midway opens at 10 a.m. on weekends and 12 noon on weekdays. Admission is only $4 for adults, children under 12 are admitted free. Admittance to the race track is included in the admission price of the Fair. Parking on the Fairgrounds for a minimal fee, and free parking at the Park and Ride location on Deereco Road are available on a first-come, first-serve basis. The Fairgrounds encourage use of the Light Rail with an easily accessible Light Rail stop at the Fairgrounds Cow Palace Gate. For general information call (410) 252-0200, ext. 226.

Farm Women Societies

Farm Women Society 1

A doggie roast at the home of Agnes Noll, Oley, preceded the July business meeting of Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 1. President Evelyn Heacock presided at the meeting.

Plans were made for the annual summer picnic of Group 1 which will be held August 18, at Levengood's Grove.

Group 1 notes with regret the recent death of one of their group, Pauline Heffelfinger. She will be greatly missed.

The August meeting will be hosted by Geraldine Marsteller, Douglassville, on August 14, at 7:30 p.m.

Lancaster Society 8

Lancaster Society of Farm Women No. 8 met on July 24 at the summer cottage of President Arlene Witman in Mt. Gretna. Members had an enjoyable luncheon followed by a short business meeting with devotions given by Mary Anne Spangler. The next meeting will be on September 11, at 1:30 p.m. held at the Donegal Presbyterian Church in Mount Joy.

Berks Society 3

Berks County Society 3 of Farm Women held its June meeting at the home of Wendy Shane, Boyertown. The theme was safety. Members took a quiz on fire safety and also one on driving knowledge.

Reports were given on profits from the Biever auction and the status on hex sign sales.

Plans were made for the group to travel to Dutch Apple Dinner Theater on Sept. 29 to see "Crazy for You."

The next meeting will be a family picnic at the home of Jeanette Miller, Barto, on July 23. Each memeber should bring a hot or cold dish.

Rural Youth To Hold Reunion

NEFFSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The 59th anniversary reunion of Lancaster County Rural Youth will be celebrated with a catered picnic at the Neffsville Community Park on Sept. 19, from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. Former members and friends are asked to send reservations and a check to Allen Risser, 175 Shreiner Rd., Leola, PA 17540.

Cost is $10 per person. The program includes group singing and games.

Formerly the Lancaster County Rural Youth was an active group of rural young people who met monthly. They enjoyed square dancing and educational speakers. Plays were performed and a monthly newsletter published. About 30 couples met and married members of this group.

Smith Wins UD Teaching Award

NEWARK, Del. — One crisp winter day, a prospective student and her parents encountered a puzzling scene as they toured the College of Agricultural Sciences at the University of Delaware.

Peeking into the landscape design studio, they saw the class members of basic landscape design working as a team to lift Professor Gary Smith over their heads and across an imaginary wall.

Smith chuckles at the memory, "I'm sure that high-schooler and her parents had to be a little confused."

What the visitors were watching was a team-building exercise that Smith had planned with the help of professionals from the College of Athletics. They also were witnessing a risk-taker at work, a teacher committed to challenging the assumptions and expectations of his students.

This charismatic and engaging 39-year-old, who favors khakis and denim for his work wardrobe, willingly goes out on a limb when he teaches — setting aside lesson plans and agendas when the occasion calls for it; using storytelling and other novel learning techniques; and doing team-building exercises, such as the imaginary wall climb, to foster cooperative learning.

An associate professor of landscape design in the department of plant and soil sciences, Smith sums up his teaching philosophy in one short phrase: "flexible and innovative."

Another way to sum it up would be "award-winning." Smith's fresh, imaginative approach to teaching has earned him the 1996 Excellence in Teaching Award, a distinguished honor bestowed on just four UD professors annually.

"I have a mission to draw attention to two things that we as a culture don't give enough attention to," said Smith, taking a short break in his comfortably cluttered office. "First, I want to foster a strong sense of caring for our planet and, second, I want to promote individual creativity.

"As a teacher and as a landscape designer, I try to achieve those goals in everything I do."

But creativity won't flourish if you're afraid to make a mistake, and Smith said that many of his students exhibit a deep fear of failure.

"Somehow, somewhere, they got the notion that failure is really bad," said Smith. "I think I'm a good model for them. I show them that it's okay to take risks.

"For example, recently my students flagged out the locations for 450 wildflowers in the UD Botanic Gardens. There was real potential for error in such a large undertaking, but we carefully made our plans, and then I took them out in the gardens and let them at it.

"These students are accustomed to working in the hard sciences where objectivity is paramount," said Smith, "but I help them see that there are no absolute answers in this field. Landscape design involves very intuitive and subjective ways of looking at the world."

Smith's way of looking at the world and caring for the planet have earned him kudos in the landscape design community. After an undergraduate degree from UD and a master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania, Smith owned a successful five-person design firm during the 1980s. He also began teaching part time at Penn during this period, and by 1989 had made the decision to join the UD faculty and "get my message out more widely through teaching."

But Smith continues to design for a wide range of public and private gardens, greenways, and urban landscapes. He has developed master plans for such locations as the Delaware Memorial Bridge greenway, woodlands at Tyler Arboretum, Buena Vista and Belmont Hall state conference centers, and, most recently, Peirce's Woods at Longwood Gardens.

And all of Smith's professional projects become learning experiences for his students through case study work, field trips, and internship opportunities.

"I turn down a lot of projects," said Smith. "My main criterion for accepting a project is "What is its value to my teaching program?'"

Soon, Smith will able to share with his students the struggles, challenges, excitement and achievement of yet another design project. In July he begins a sabbatical to develop a master plan for all of Longwood Gardens — a comprehensive document that will examine the status of Longwood today and the direction it will develop in the future.

ly runs America's oldest short-line steam railroad. Passengers can deboard at a picnic grove and walk to the maze to enjoy the festivities and then reboard the train on a later run.

The maze is open Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays from 10 a.m. until dusk through Labor Day. Admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children under 11. Groups of 20 or more are $5 and $3.

For more information on the Amazing Maize Maze in Paradise, call the Pennsylvania Dutch Visitors Bureau at 1-800- PA-Dutch or Cherry-Crest Farms at (717) 687-6843.

Son Jerry and herdsman Fred Ranck milk every other weekend.

A petting zoo is available for the young at heart who visit the corn maze.

Last year, Coleman had the highest bushel of corn per acre than anyone else in the state in the 5-acre non-irrigated category. His 228.7 bushels per acre was fifth in the nation.

For this achievement, Coleman and his wife won a trip to Phoenix, Ariz., which he was surprised to learn is the number one corn production state in the U.S.

While Arizona irrigates all corn, this area does not.

Coleman said, "The Lord blessed us with good weather with rain at the right time, although twice rain did not fall on fields less than a mile from ours."

Coleman said, "Our farm produces better in a dry year than in a wet one."

In 1989, a neighboring house came up for sale. Although the Colemans didn't need it at the time, they purchased it with the idea that sometime one of their children could live on it.

They opened it up as Cherry Crest Tourist Farm, which caters to families vacationing in the area.

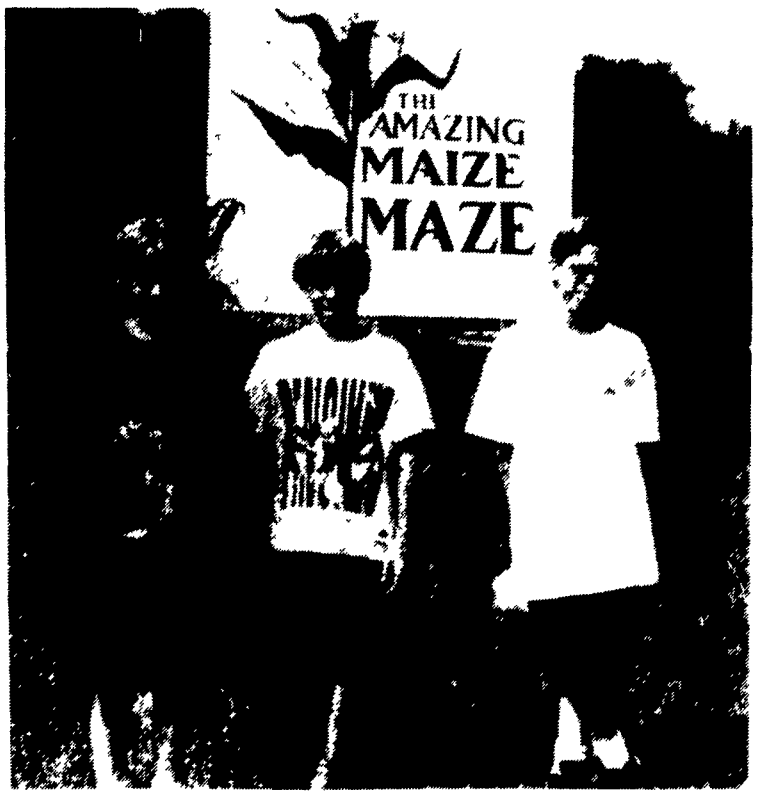
(Turn to Page B36)



Twins Mike and Chris Bobish, 13, with friend Jimmy Brenaman, 12, from Landenburg report that they made it through the maze in 13 minutes. They loved the challenge and went back for a second run, but that took longer, because they got a bit "corn-fused."

the kids don't have a house," Coleman said.

The two-unit house offers affordable vacations to families who cook their own meals.

Donna said, "It works out really well because families can enjoy privacy and yet visit the farm and help with milking whenever they want to."

A petting zoo is set up on the tourist farm property.

"Children just love collecting eggs that the families can use for breakfast."

Donna said, "The only complaint is the kids never want to leave. They call it 'our farm.'"

Most of the clientel are repeat visitors.

The Colemans' daughter Sherri is married to Brian Groff. They have a 2-year-old daughter and live on an attached part of the farm house. Although the Groffs have off-farm jobs, they milk every other weekend and help with other farm jobs.

During the corn maze opening, a daughter Shelly, 21, serves as the employee relations person and a son Jerry, 19, helps with maintenance. The Colemans also have a 21-month-old son Jared.

The idea for the maze was germinated when Coleman read about the corn maze that was set up in Shippensburg last year. He contacted the American Maize Company, which put him in touch with Adrian Fisher of England, the foremost maze designer in the world, and Don Frantz, a theatrical producer. Both worked together before to hold the 1995 and 1996 Guinness Record for the largest maze in the world.

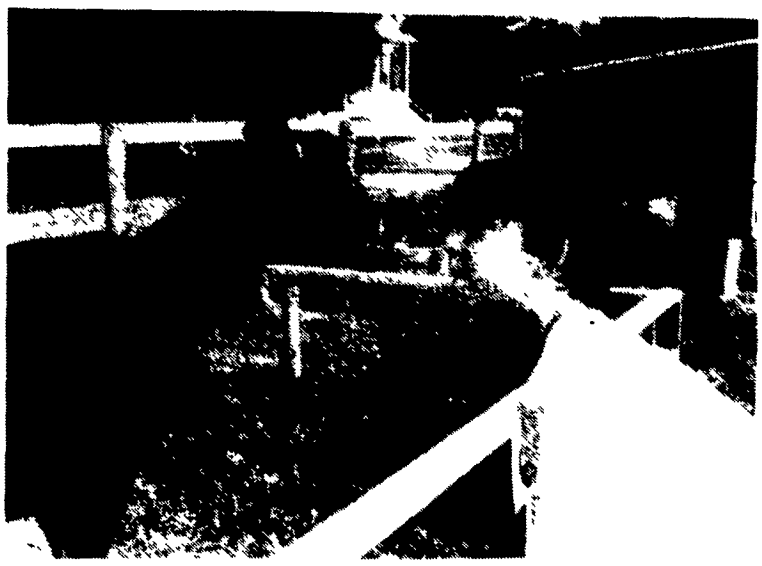
While the maze remains open, the Colemans would like nonprofit groups to operate food stands.

Coleman emphasizes the need for farmers to become involved in the political process.

"I don't consider myself qualified but I am willing to learn," Coleman said of his own involvement. Coleman served on the agriculture advisory board for Joe Pitts when he ran for Congress.

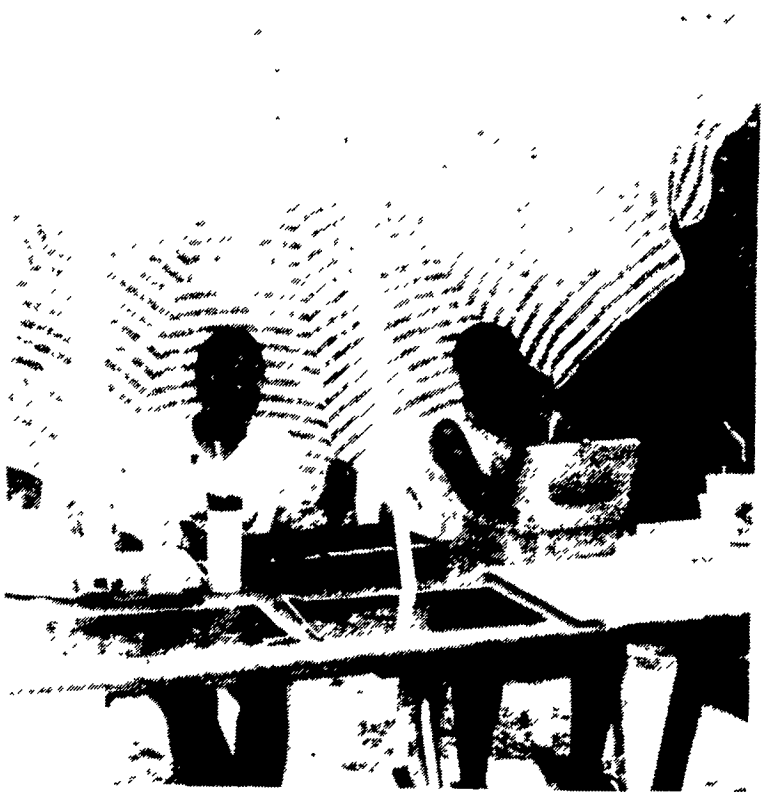
Coleman has also served as past president for the Lancaster County Holstein Association and is a commissioner for the Pa. Producers Research and Development. He is a trustee and an active member of Paradise Mennonite Church.

Since the recent birth of their son, Donna's community involvement has been curtailed buty she is active in church and a member of Farm Women Society 14.



David Frantz, 9, from Harrisburg admires this Nanny Goat close-up.

Greeters Nick Abreu, Tiffany Martin, and Jessica France welcome visitors to the maze. Twenty employees are needed daily to operate the maze. Parents and grandparents who brought children often remarked, "This is good, clean family entertainment. It's nice to have a place where the children can just run."



Tiffany Hershey and Jessica Mendez offer tickets to those entering the Amazing Maize Maze Locomotive Layrinth.

PDPP Board Supports Summer Cheese

PITTSBURGH — On behalf of dairy promotion checkoff dollars from the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program Board, a powerful promotion designed to build cheese sales this summer was implemented throughout western and north central Pennsylvania.

Implemented by the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, "Cheese to the Rescue" is designed to help cheese fit into busy lifestyles and schedules to help harried at-home cooks prepare great-tasting homemade snacks in minutes. Consumers seem to have less time than ever to prepare meals, however, recent consumer polls and an upward trend in cookbook sales suggest that home-cooked meals are making a comeback.

"Cheese is easy to use and it tastes great," said Dave Hunley, director of marketing for ADADC Mid East. "Our market research tells us about 90 percent of consumers buy cheese. However, the research also tells us that cheese is part of only seven percent of all snacks and dinners. The misperception is that cheese is not associated with quick and easy meal preparation. 'Cheese to the Rescue' is designed to change that idea."

In emphasizing the ease of use and taste, "Cheese to the Rescue" complements on-going food publicity and food service programs in offering a coordinated and integrated message of convenience and great taste. The message of the cheese promotion fits today's consumers for taste, variety and versatility of home cooking, while balancing family and business time commitments.

"By showing consumers how simply and easily domestic cheese can fit into their lifestyle, we're giving them more reasons to purchase cheese and use it regularly," said Hunley. "This program makes using cheese natural and uncomplicated. Thus it is receptive to consumers and they'll buy more."

"Cheese to the Rescue" television advertising is running nationally, and print ads have also been placed in national consumer magazines. The promotion also includes a retail component. Supermarkets throughout Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Erie, Altoona and Williamsport promoted domestic cheese during June Dairy Month and Fourth of July cookout season.

"Integrating consumer advertising with the retail marketing program further leverages the investment of the promotion," said Hunley.

"We're spending our dollars more wisely," said Karl Kroeck, chariman of the PDPP Board. "As dairy farmers, we know that working hard is not enough.

In addition to displays and exhibits, competition was held for dairy, beef, sheep, rabbits and goats.

In swine competition, Justine Graff of Port Royal took the grand championship with a spotted cross. The reserve was also a spotted cross shown by Joseph William Zug.

Brian Bomberger of Port Royal showed a Charolais for the grand champion beef. Gabriel Wochley of Mt. Pleasant Mills showed the reserve, which was a Limousine.

The grand champion sheep was a breeding ewe shown by Rayn Pellman of Oakland Mills. Crystal Dawn Swartz of Thompsontown showed the reserve and was champion fitter and showman in sheep competition.

Summer Festival Draws Adams County Participants

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — On Saturday, July 20, Adams County 4-H teens participated in the East Berlin Summer Festival held at the East Berlin Area Community Center. The object of the day was to make the public aware of 4-H and its many activities. A 4-H display board was set up and pamphlets were handed out to interested kids and parents. In the afternoon, the teens led Olympic style games and relays. The games included egg toss, balloon stomp, the limbo, and frisbee and ball tosses. Participants were awarded ribbons and lollipops.

4-H teens who conduced the games were Heidi Miller of New Oxford, Sadie Bucher of New Oxford, Kristi Cunningham of Biglerville, Wayne Flickinger of Biglerville, and Heather Glennon, Summer Program Assistant.

Penn State Cooperative Extension also had a display at the Summer Festival. Mike Helms, Extension program assistant-agriculture, answered questions and provided information about the Adams County Extension Office and Pennsylvania's agriculture.

Ag Progress Dates Announced

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Planting crops by the no-till method has become an accepted soil conservation practice. But for commercial tomato growers, no-till is still a relatively new technique.

Tomato growers can compare no-till with other planting and growing methods by attending Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

A new tomato planting and yield demonstration heads the list of production-related attractions at this year's event, said Ag Progress Days manager Robert Oberheim.

"Growers will be able to see and evaluate a tomato crop planted in late May," Oberheim said. "We'll have no-till and conventional plots, with and without trickle irrigation, as well as plots where the tomatoes were planted through black plastic mulch and irrigated by the trickle method. This will enable growers to compare yields from five different sets of growing conditions."

A notill planter will also be demonstrated each day of the event. Visitors will see the machine in action planting tomatoes and a cole crop such as cabbage or cauliflower.

A new spring wheat combine harvesting demonstration also is planned. Oberheim said other popular field demonstrations will be back, including hay mowing, baling, round bale handling, and composting.

Other exhibits, tours, and workshops will highlight the latest research and information on crops and soils, dairy and livestock production, integrated pest management, conservation practices, and woodlot management. More than 300 commercial and noncommercial exhibitors will be on hand to display the newest goods and services.

In addition, a variety of family-oriented attractions are planned, including storytelling, horse exhibitions, an insect zoo, live animal displays, antique and craft exhibits and SciQ, a TV-style game show.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rocksprings, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours of 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Admission and parking are free.

"Penn State AG Science...
We're More Than You Think"

Experimental Orchard Shows Something Old, New In Apples

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Most of us have seen grapes and other vine crops growing on trellises. But researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences are studying these structures for producing fruits normally seen growing on free-standing trees.

An experimental orchard will be among the cutting-edge research highlighted on guided tours of the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center during Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

The free 30-minute bus tours, which leave every 20 minutes every day, will take visitors through Penn State's horticulture, plant pathology, agronomy and entomology farms, as well as the USDA Pasture Research Laboratory.

On the horticulture farm, visitors will see fruit trees growing on trellises, wires and poles as part of an ongoing study of intensive production systems for apples and pears. Cylinders are placed in the ground at the base of some trees, enabling scientists to monitor root growth with video cameras. In contrast, the tour also will include the Clark Kerr Apple Variety Museum, a living repository of 120 heirloom apple varieties, many of which date back to colonial times.

In other horticulture plots, colored mulches are being tested for their effects on tomato, cucumber, and cantaloupe production. Studies have shown that red, blue and yellow mulches can influence soil temperature, the amount of reflected light, insect infestations, and crop yields.

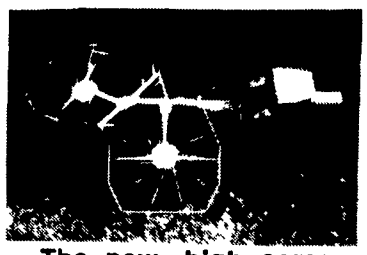
Rake Design Flexible



The new, high acreage Claas® Liner 1550 Twin Dual Rotary Rake now offers a single 43-inch swath with 22-foot, 4-inch working width or two single 35-inch swaths with 24-foot, 7-inch working width for increased flexibility. Even at high speeds, its contour undercarriage adapts to uneven conditions.

COLUMBUS, Ind. — The high acreage Claas® Liner 1550 Twin Dual Rotary Rake features a new design for increased flexibility. You can now choose either a single 43-inch swath with 22-foot, 4-inch working width or two single 35-inch swaths with 24-foot, 7-inch working width.

The Liner 1550 contains the contour undercarriage to adapt to uneven, rough ground conditions. Even at high working speeds it delivers a thorough, clean harvest, increasing yield. The twin rotors side sweep crop into loose, fluffy windrows for faster drying and easy baling.

The rotors are driven by double universal joints, permitting the 1550 to be lifted from the tractor seat without disengaging the PTO and allowing operation of one rotor where space is limited. Each rotor has 11 tine arms and each tine carrier consists of four double tines. The 1550 has a low horsepower requirement and features a lower link, pull-type hitch.

The 1550 handles transport from field to field easily. The rotors can be hydraulically lifted from the tractor seat while protective frames swing in front of the tines automatically. Transport width is 9.7 feet.

New Holland is also associate sponsor of the Bill Elliott McDonald's/New Holland NASCAR Winston Cup Series car.

New Holland will offer its customers limited edition, official racing collectibles including 1/18-scale and 1/64-scale New Holland race car replicas, pewter belt buckles and key chains, and a wide variety of other products.

Wearables and other New Holland Racing team items are also available in celebration of the company's first year car sponsorship. Race merchandise includes jackets, shirts, sweatshirts, and caps. Collector series mugs, coolers, watches, and many other New Holland Racing items are also available.

New Holland began its association with Winston Cup Champion, Bill Elliott, in the fall of 1995 when he became spokesperson for The New Holland Oil Advantage parts marketing campaign. In March, New Holland announced expanded sponsorship of the Elliott-Hardy Racing Team for 1996.

Ron Barfield, Jr. drives the #94 New Holland Thunderbird in the ARCA Series, as well as NASCAR's Busch Series. The Busch Series serves as the training ground for promising drivers looking to step-up to the Winston Cup Series.

Barfield collected two NASCAR Slim Jim All-Pro Series wins in 1995, 10 top five and 16 top ten finishes. He raced his first ARCA event in February 1996 and finished fifth.

Bill Elliott, voted NASCAR's Most Popular Driver 10 times, is the only driver in Winston Cup racing history to win the Winston Million. Elliott won the 1988 Winston Cup Championship, has been runner-up three times, and still holds the record for fastest lap ever, 212 mph at Talladega, Ala.

Collaboration Yields Improved Corn Hybrids

JOHNSTON, Iowa — Ten years ago, few in agriculture would have predicted a seed company would form an alliance with the world's leading company in sequencing and discovering genes in human research.

But that's exactly what Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., did when it signed a collaboration agreement with Human Genome Sciences (HGS).

There's no question that agriculture is experiencing more advancements in genetic enhancement technology than ever before. As the role of biotechnology in genetic improvement grows, Pioneer is forming a wide range of business alliances — such as the one with HGS — to improve the overall performance of its seed and other products.

Based in Rockville, Md., HGS conducts discovery research on new means to predict, prevent, and cure disease in humans. The company's discoveries help develop diagnostic tools, therapeutic methods, and prevent diseases.

As part of its agreement with Pioneer, HGS will apply its expertise to sequence, identify, and determine the function of corn genes.

"Traditionally in the seed industry, we've used plant breeding to improve hybrids," said Dr. Robert Fincher, director of Pioneer's research for agronomic traits. "To achieve the level of genetic advancements we want to make today, we're going to have to rely on both plant breeding and biotechnology."

No one company has all the expertise or resources to excel in all areas, Fincher said. The crossover between medical research and agricultural applications is one reason why Pioneer will continue to create additional corporate alliances.

"Our agreement with HGS allows Pioneer to access a tremendous amount of corn genes," Fincher said. "Our goal is to discover genes that control important agronomic traits so that we can improve these traits genetically. The HGS collaboration also helps us find ways to add multi-gene traits to our products, rather than being limited to introducing single gene traits."

Dekalb Names Sales V.P.

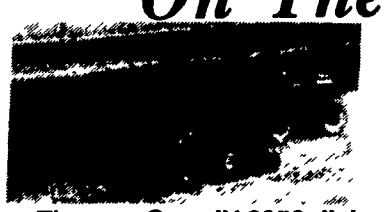
DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation said that it has elected Dennis Schlott to vice president of sales, U.S. Seed. Previously, Schlott was national sales manager.

"Under the leadership of Dennis Schlott, sales volume of Dekalb's domestic corn products increased about 25 percent in 1996, allowing the company to gain an estimated one point of market share," said Richard O. Ryan, Dekalb's president and chief operating officer. "It was the third consecutive year of sales volume and market share gains for hybrid corn, Dekalb's most important product, on top of strong volume growth of other products."

Schlott, 42, joined Dekalb in 1977 and has served in a variety of positions of increasing responsibility, including national sales manager since 1994. Previously, Schlott held management positions in field, area, and regional sales, as well as in product planning and management.

Schlott earned bachelor's and master's degrees in economics, both from Southern Illinois University in Edwardsville, Ill.

Disk Harrow Improves On The Best



The new Case IH 3950 disk harrow is available with fixed standards or the new cushion gang, 7-inch or 9-inch spacing, 20-inch or 22-inch blades and in sizes from 19 feet 10 inches to 33 feet 7 inches.

RACINE, Wis. — The new Case IH 3950 disk harrow boasts improvements over every function of the disk harrow it succeeds — the flex-wing 3900, already the most popular-selling disk harrow on the market.

"We took the best disk harrow and made it better," said Dave Duff, Case Corporation product manager. "The 3950 is unsurpassed in durability, productivity and reliability. It delivers superior performance in managing residue."

And it does it with less horsepower. Duff said the 3950 offers excellent leveling and pulls easier through the soil with less horsepower required than competitive disk harrows of the same size, due to its shallow concavity blades.

The 3950 is available with fixed standards or the new cushion gang, 7-inch or 9-inch spacing, 20-inch or 22-inch blades and in sizes from 19 feet 10 inches to 33 feet 7 inches.

SWS Names V.P.

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — Somerset Welding and Steel announces the promotion of Dan Parks to vice president and general manager of Lincoln Supply & Equipment (LS&E).

Riggs Industries, parent corporation of Somerset Welding and Steel and LS&E, has recognized Parks' accomplishments.

Parks began managing LS&E in 1988, a year before Somerset Welding and Steel moved their plant to the LS&E location. He was instrumental in the addition of several lines of farm equipment, the True Value Hardware, and Just Ask Rentals franchises, and the 1995 addition of 5265 square feet to the building.

Dan Parks

"LS&E has grown quite a bit since it was a Mine & Mill Supply in Boswell. In 1982, it ws moved to Rt. 601 as a Central Tractor Farm & Family center and now, with two store locations, in Springs, Pa. and McCoole, Md., we can better help our customers satisfy their needs," said Parks.

Parks is responsible for overseeing LS&E's full service farm and truck equipment sales, the True Value and Just Ask Rentals departments, plus the repair, welding, and fabrication facilities at the Somerset store. He also manages the West Virginia and Maryland markets through the other locations.

Parks is a graduate of Iowa State University with a degree in agricultural Business.

T.M.R. Mixer

Unique central spiral circulator No bearings inside the mixer drum

Fewer working parts make the Patz Tumble Mixer reliable (only 3 grease fittings).

As the drum rotates, the central spiral circulator moves feed to the back of the mixer. At the same time, the fliting bolted to the drum in a spiral design move the feed to the front as it mixes with a tumbling action.

- Four sizes
- High-strength, corrosion-resistant steel mixer drum
- Electronic scale
- Low-rate financing available.

"THE NEED FOR QUALITY FEED AND GRAIN STORAGE IS GREATER TODAY THAN AT ANY TIME IN RECENT HISTORY!"

How can we help to make sure that you get a quality corn storage unit constructed before the expected rush in August and September?

Give us a call to discuss early discounts, financing, and unloaders.

Listen to what these farmers from VA say about their switch to a poured concrete silo for their hi-moisture shelled corn storage: "Even during the hottest summer in our memory, the shelled corn from our poured concrete silo has kept its bright yellow color and has not heated. We have the best hi-moisture shelled corn ever."

Signed: Keith Wilson, Paul Wilson, Gerald Garder; Cave View Farms, Inc. Weyers Cave, VA

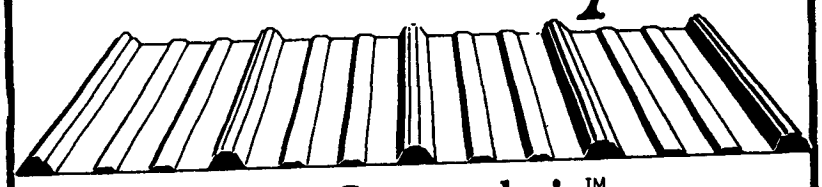
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain™ roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

LLAMAS LLAMAS LLAMAS

If you've been considering starting in llamas, or having a llama for a pet, why not stop in to see our herd.

Our young males start at $500, our weanling females at $2,500, our pregnant females at $3,500. A deposit will hold any of our crias (baby llamas) for you.

We prefer selling off the farm, rather than subjecting our animals to the stress of auctions.

All of our llamas are registered with the International Llama Registry. Some of the finest wool and blood lines can be found in our herd, including Otter Creek Harold.

All llamas can be halter led, and are gently trained by teenagers.

Mildred Seeds Is Top-O-Hill Jerseys

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

DOWNINGTOWN (Chester Co.) — For more than 30 years, the tanbark has been a constant for the tan Jersey cows owned by Mildred Seeds, of Top-O-Hill Jerseys in Downingtown.

Her living room is replete with mementoes of her cattles' victories at different shows — supreme championships at the Great Allentown Fair, the York Fair, Bloomsburg Fair, the Gratz Fair, Schuylkill County Fair, Kimberton Fair and grand champion and premier breeder of Jerseys at the 1986 Farm Show.

She also has one of a limited number of miniature castings of a full-size bronze statue of a lying down, pregnant Jersey cow, that is located at Brandywine Museum.

The cow that served as a model for the museum piece was Top-O-Hill Vedas Miss Gratz, one of Mildred's cows that was selected by the artist commissioned to do the sculpture.

Miss Gratz, out of one of Mildred's top cows and sired by an Isle of Jersey bull, was born at the Gratz Fair when Mildred arrived there after showing at the York Fair.

For years, Seeds has milked her Jerseys and maintained a show circuit. And for years, she has been a 4-H dairy leader in Chester County, sharing some of her cattle with local youth who were interested in showing, training, grooming and caring for cattle, but who otherwise had no place or money to keep their own animals.

Seeds said recently that health problems and a lack of help to care for and milk her 23 cow-herd appear to be telling her that it's time to give up her role as caretaker and breeder of her Top-O-Hill Jerseys.

Mildred Seeds as a teenager shows her first registered Jersey, Remus Rosalie Design.

Mildred Seeds pours fresh milk into a can to get dumped into her milk cooler.

She said she's reluctant to sell them to a commercial operation and she doesn't much care for freestalls. She wants to know that her string of cattle, including several high producing animals which have classified Excellent, is being appreciated and cared for.

Seesds said that if a young person needing a place to stay and who was willing to take care of and milk cows were interested, she would accept that kind relationship — she could use the help and she could offer a place to stay in return for the work to care for the 23 cows and some heifer calves.

At the same time, there would be enough time during the day to allow that young person to hold a regular job.

Otherwise, the herd is for sale.

Top-O-Hill Cutie is one Mildred Seeds' homebred exceptional Jerseys.

She notified the Jersey Marketing Service Inc., the marketing arm of the American Jersey Cattle Association, of the availability of the herd, but as of June had no response.

Why no response, she said she doesn't know, but based on the fact that she only sold one calf as a 4-H project this year, she said she assumes that high grain prices and tight margins are forcing dairy families to cut back on nonessential spending. Unfortunately, nonessential spending can quickly become forgoing buying off the farm to purchase a 4-H project calf.

The only other reason she said she could think of for not having any response from the marketing service is that her cows don't carry indexes — a widely used, and somewhat debated, tool for comparing genetic potential.

Her line of Jerseys go back to a single Jersey heifer calf her parents purchased for her in the winter of 1955 for $100 from Valcuse Farm in Rhode Island.

The calf was registered as Remus Rosalie Design. When she was classified for the first time as a 12-year-old, she went Excellent.

Mildred was in her teens when she got the high pedigree calf and it was at the recommendation of the county agent for the USDA Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (absorbed into the current Consolidated Farm Service Agency while the SCS has become the Natural Resources Conservation Service) who came to the farm to measure wheat yield.

"He found out I was in 4-H and had shown a couple of Jerseys and he was very interested in helping," Mildred said recently.

"He was a top notch showman and he worked for a Coatesville farm, and he was the one responsible for me buying the good show calf."

He was also the one who influenced Mildred's preferences in breeding and preparing for the show ring.

Anyone who has seen Mildred Seeds' animals around the show ring knows whose belong to her — the cows have those light amber, black-tipped curled horns.

When Mildred started being involved in the Jersey breed, all dairy cows in all other breeds had horns, except for perhaps a particularly ill-tempered Bossy.

As changes on the farm were made to reduce dangers on the farm, the dairy industry adopted the practice of de-horning calves.

It continues today in most occassions — except for those with cows who have expressed a "wholistic" philosophy that says what is natural is healthy, and for Mildred.

It was that same ASCS agent, the Jersey enthusiast and showman who influenced Mildred's decision to allow the horns to grow. "He told me that horns made a Jersey head," she said.

But years before that she got her first Jersey. It was a grade animal that was born the day her father had a complete herd dispersal. "The day of the sale, the cow came fresh and we couldn't sell the calf. Daddy said, 'Give it to Mildred.'" she said.

Mildred named it "Baby."

Only nine or 10 years old herself, Mildred said she used to take her school books with her every evening and go to the barn to read to the calf.

Because of the dispersal, the barn was completely empty except for this one lone calf, and, in the morning and evenings, Mildred.

The calf got frost bitten ears but otherwise enjoyed good health, and when it was time, Mildred had her heifer bred.

In the meantime, the neighbor's barn burned down and he moved his surviving herd into the empty Seeds barn.

When Baby came fresh, the neighbor taught Mildred how to milk.

"Daddy said, if you're going to milk one, you might as well milk more." After the neighbor moved out, Mildred had a few animals and her father bought more.

After she graduated from high school, her father added to the barn. He bought a herd of Guernseys to fill it.

Mildred's preference for Jerseys is strong. She called her father's purchase of Guernseys "terminal."

But it wasn't.

"After we weeded them (Guernseys) out, we went strickly to buying registered Jerseys.

Her father sold the herd in 1964, with Mildred keeping five cows, a couple heifers and a bull.

She borrowed $400 from the bank and purchased a trailer load of alfalfa hay (she said it went for $27 a ton) to feed her Jerseys.

Then went her father sold the barn, farm house and five acres, he built another home on the remaining acres (now 55 acres), where Mildred currently lives and they moved into it on Nov. 1, 1967.

Unfortunately, her father died this past spring, and she doesn't own the farm. But she does own the barn she built with her own money and some parts from the old barn, such as the stall scraper.

When she built the barn she only intended to keep 12 miking cows. Now she has 23. And then she included maternity pens.

Her animals have done well. She had two daughters from the first Desgin cow. One was named the 1966 national produce of dam.

She has bred Excellents and they test high. In February three of her milking cows were tested at producing more than 80 pounds of milk per day. That's more in line with a Holstein production.

However, the milk is much richer. She said that in 1967 her herd was the first to make more than 600 pounds of fat. "They always say show cows won't milk."

Of course it isn't true.

And some people have made the observation that show cows won't last. Most of Mildred's cows live well into the mid to late teens.

This is at a time when people are working to ensure they can get three lactations out of a commercial herd cow before culling it for whatever reason.

Then again, Seeds' herd is small and probably does get first class treatment, especially as it concerns limiting stress.

They don't get a totally mixed ration. They get good traditional feed.

But they have plenty of pasture to occupy and from Mildred's picture window, they create their own scene of tranquility, making their way from the cement block milking barn's excercise lot through knee-high grass in a slow string across a shallow swale up into a higher pasture.

The farm sits on a hilltop, thus the prefix for her cows and the farm name, "Top-O-Hill."

The pasture is overtaken with forest on the side hills, and white tail deer come out often and mingle near the herd, bounding off when someone gets too close, the tall white tails instantly alerting the observer to the fact that those weren't all Jersey cows after all.

Down below is the urban sprawl, more like a flood whose rising waters have created an island of higher ground, with waves of the sprawl lapping up to the edge of the farm.

Mildred is the last person in her municipality to milk cows. A neighbor who had cows sold out and moved to Missouri a year ago, she said.

Sometime now, when she leaves for a daytime job, she has to wait for five minutes to pull out from the road (Seeds Lane) that used to be the farm lane onto Glenside Road, a secondary traffic road that residential development and a commuter society have overwhelmed.

But she can go down the list of her cows, the lineage, their achievements, production and character. They are her most favorite pleasures.

There's different things to the herd also. She has a cow in the herd that was a frozen embryo for five years. Mildred had flushed an Excellent cow and got seven embryos out of Silver Beason bull. She god four heifer calves.

The Special cow was a granddaughter of the Design cow, the St. Paddy cow is a daughter of Special. The line is direct and also Candadian influenced.

She also has one of her own bulls, one she used on the herd more than 20 years ago and she still has frozen semen from it.

She said it might be time to thaw out that 1974-frozen genetics and reintroduce it into the herd.

"My philosophy is that a show cow will milk. If I have to milk them, I like to look at them, and I want them to live a long time.

She has some such as Top-O-Hill Silver Beacon Tootsie, with a recent lactation of 19,437 pounds of milk, 731 pounds of protein, and 891 pounds of fat; her daughter T-O-H Juno Toostie Roll was third place in the county with 15,720 pounds milk, 609 pounds protein and 710 pounds fat.

Her herd is well connected and she can prove the claims. She can show the awards and the milk records. She can show you how much siblings went for and their fame.

The truth is, sometimes a cow family just doesn't get the recognition it deserves because the owner isn't wealthy or influential enough to tell more people about the qualities.

Today it's called marketing, bu excellent is excellent, and a lot o' rich milk without a TMR and shots of bovine somatotropin.

Mildred has a herd she is proud of.

But what good is having a love of Jersey cattle and showing them, if it can't be shared?

Mildred's volunteer efforts through 4-H have been heralded because of the number of people to whom she has taught the basics of showing cattle and preparing them for the show ring.

Mildred usually finishes out her Jerseys with a brass chain and padlock draped over the horns, coming down just between and above the eyes. It creates a symmetry of color and a jewelry effect that creates an exotic look that makes most everyone who has seen it comment on how "pretty" the cows look.

Some years ago, Bordon Inc. offered her money for a cow to replace their Elsie cow, she said, but the money offered was marginal even for a commercial-herd cow, much less for a registered, pedigreed, horns-intact animal that was presumably to be used to promote a company worldwide.

But there are many, too many to ask about their experiences, who have learned from Mildred.

Owen Bewley, son of Richard and Jo Bewley, West Chester, was one. He currently works as a West Coast field representative for the American Jersey Cattle Club.

Born in Ireland, his parents moved to the United States in 1978. Last week, Bewley said in a telephone interview from Turloc, California, that his grandfather was the former secretary of the Irish Jersey Society and that his family relatives have the oldest Jersey herd in Ireland and have been long associated with Jerseys.

When his parents came to the United States they moved to a take care of a Guernsey herd in Ohio, which didn't work out, and then moved to West Chester, where his father took night courses and eventually became administrator of a retirement home.

Living in town, Bewley said his interest in farming and Jerseys came when he was 13. His parents called the local extension and found Mildred, who has been heading the local 4-H dairy club for years.

"I got involved with Mildred and bought two calves from her. And I traveled around with her and her cows for two years to the shows she goes to and I got great exposure.

"She was a great start, she really started me with Jerseys. I met an awful lot of people through her," he said.

"I learned some fundamental basics from Mildred, and her desire to show is infectious.

"She's helped a lot of kids get started in 4-H. I'm not sure how many, but I had a great experience with her."

The Chester County Extension dairy agent also said she is synonymous with the Chester County 4-H dairy club.

Though he has only worked with her for seven years, Walt Wurster, the extension agent, said, "She's been a real asset as a leader in the county, as far as getting young people started in 4-H and teaching people how to care for animals.

"She's probably one of the best people for fitting and showing animals. She's been doing it for years and can teach people a lot.

"I think she's been a big supporter of the 4-H program and at one time she coached the dairy bowl team," Wurster said. "She's been on the 4-H center program, trying to get a 4-H center (built for youth) off the ground.

"And there's no question. In the Jersey breed, even with the very small herd she has, she's made an impact with her bloodlines. She has good genetics."

Wurster said there are some people he knows who had Mildred as a 4-H leader who are now bringing their children to her to learn the basics and how to appreciate cows and how to work for something desired.

She's been involved with 4-H for more than 40 years.

However, she does have some medical problems and probably won't be able to tend the herd in coming months.

That is why she would like to develop a relationship with someone young who like to learn about the animals and could keep the herd milked, fed and cared for until she can get back up on her feet.

Or if someone out there would like to buy a well-developed line of Jersey cattle, and would respect them, she'd enjoy getting a letter or a telephone call.

USDA Announces Sheep Promotion Dates

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced that a second nationwaide sheep referendum on the Sheep and Wool Promotion, Research, Education, and Information Order will be conducted Oct. 1.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, a marketing and regulatory programs agency, has oversight responsibility for federal research and promotion programs. AMS administrator Lon Hatamiya said all producers, feeders, and importers who certify they were engaged in the production, feeding or importation of sheep or sheep products (except importers of raw wool only) between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 1994, are eligible to vote. Hatamiya said the a second referendum is needed based on a review conducted by USDA, which revealed that the referendum rules were inconsistently applied during the Feb . 6, 1996, referendum.

Voters may register and vote in person or request absentee ballots at one of USDA's county Cooperative Extension Service offices. Absentee ballots must be requested from the office serving the county of voter residence, for individuals, or the county where the business headquarters is located, or coporations. Absentee ballot requests may be requested in person or by mail between Aug. 26 and Sept. 17. Absentee ballots must be received in county offices by close of business Sept. 27.

Dense Shell Won't Sag

New Idea bales won't sag like others.

- Fixed chamber design creates bale with dense shell that won't sag. New Idea bales keep their shape longer.
- Wide, endless belts handle leaf material carefully. More nutrient-rich leaves make it to the bale, fewer end up on the ground.
- Belt design is more reliable, with less downtime due to repair.
- Durable machine keeps working cutting after cutting, season after season.
- Big, open throat lets you start bales easily with less plugging.
- Three models available:

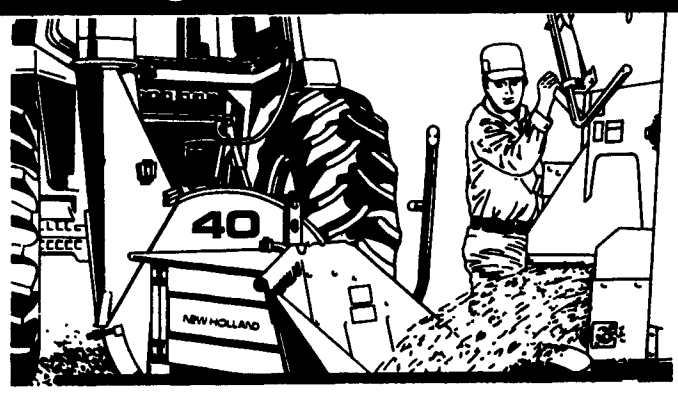
SAVE TIME



WHIRL-A-FEED® SPINNING ACTION

The New Holland Model 40 forage blower saves you time at the silo. This 1000-rpm blower features a 48-inch diameter hopper that center-fills silos 80 feet and higher. The Whirl-a-Feed® rotary table spins crops into the blower housing, and material gets off to a fast start up the blower pipe. Spinning action breaks up heavy clumps, and virtually eliminates plugging. There's less drag on the fan, and more efficient use of the tractor's horsepower.

Find out how to save time with the Model 40 from New Holland.

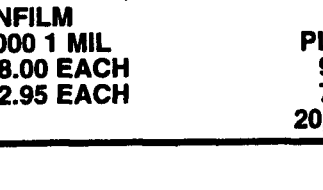
- Treated for mildew resistance
- Consistent tensile/ knot strength



- A bale of New Holland natural twine always contains the exact footage shown on the label This isn't the case with other brands For instance, a bale of twine labeled 7,200 feet by another manufacturer may actually contain only 6,800 feet This kind of inaccuracy could make a big difference in your production costs And, in your profits

NEW HOLLAND NATURAL FIBER TWINE

Feet Per Bale	Knot Strength	Gross Weight (Lbs.)	End Use Application	Sale Price!
7,200*	160	40	Square Bale	$20.79 per bale
9,000*	130	40	Square Bale	$20.79 per bale
10,000*	115	40	Square Bale	$20.79 per bale
16,000*	180	40	Round Bale	$22.80 per bale

(tensile strength)

What's the importance of the terms tensile strength and knot strength?

Tensile strength refers to the amount of resistance twine provides before breaking But it's also it's also important to consider a twine's strength That s because when twine is tied into a knot, its strength is reduced by almost 60%

New Holland natural twine has enhanced knot strength because we use only specially selected high tensile strength fibers to provide you with the best possible knot strength New Holland twine comes from Brazilian plantations where the leaves are hand selected and cut from the hardy sisal plant We harvest only the mature leaves at the bottom of the plant because of their longer and much stronger fibers This kind of careful attention continues through the entire twine producing process In fact there are a series of progressive quality controls through the various production stages to ensure twine uniformity and high tensile strength

The NEW LEADER L3020

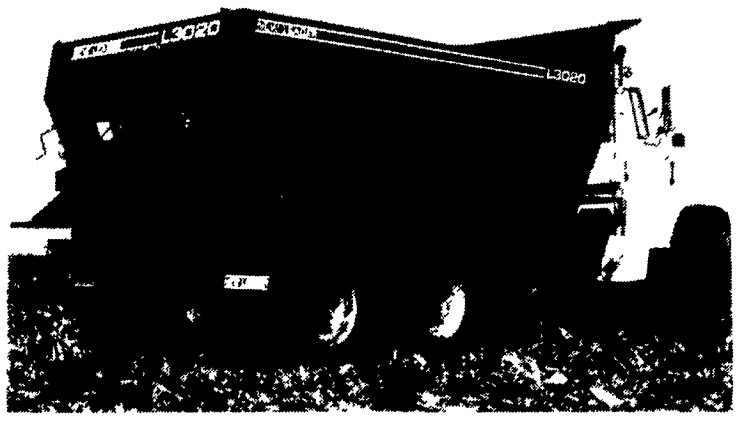
Heavy Duty LIME SPREADER



For more than 50 years, New Leader has aggressively met and exceeded market demand by producing the most dependable, adaptable and durable spreaders in the industry. The heavy-duty L-3020 spreader is a direct result of New Leader's unmatched experience in the agricultural equipment field. Designed for high-volume applications of ag-lime and gypsum, the rugged and resilient L-3020 is also suitable for spreading fertilizer and hauling aggregate material. Equipped with an optional swinging rear endgate, the L-3020 can be quickly and efficiently converted into a controlled discharge, no-hoist dump system for stockpiling. The L-3020's standard 30-inch wide conveyor system virtually eliminates the material bridging that's common with narrower conveyor spreaders. The versatile L-3020 broadcasts ag-lime at rates up to six tons per acre and fertilizer at rates as low as 150 pounds per acre.

Other Available Features:
- Complete body in 304 or 409 stainless steel
- Mounts on vehicles equipped with highway, semi or full flotation tires
- An optional ladder that attaches to either the left-or right-hand-side of the unit.
- Optional heat-and petroleum - resistant conveyor belting available for transport and application of hot asphalt.

Flexibility is the key to staying productive. And that's exactly what you'll find with the AGCO® Allis 5660 utility tractor.

The Key To Effective Middle Management.

In fact, this mid-range tractor has a 55 PTO hp engine that offers you the ultimate in maneuverability. Its low height and low center of gravity make this the ideal tractor for working inside buildings and other confined work areas. And because the platform is low to the ground, it's easy to get on and off the tractor.

- The synchromesh transmission has 12 forward and 12 reverse speed choices, with synchronized shifting in four gears and a synchronized forward/reverse shuttle.
- These directional changes help to reduce loader and rear blade cycle times.
- The AWD models feature a true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance.
- As always, behind every AGCO Allis tractor lies a 4-year/ 4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer.

To get a closer look at the 5660, stop by and see us We'll be happy to show you the way to higher productivity

Horses, Tribute To Skip Sioux At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — According to a recent study, Pennsylvania is home to some 170,000 horses, ponies and other equine animals, with an estimated value of about $620 million. Some of these magnificent animals will be featured at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

"The Ag Progress Days Equine Educational Program highlights the horse industry's contributions to Pennsylvania's agriculture and economy," said Pat Comerford, instructor in dairy and animal science and horse program coordinator for Penn State Cooperative Extension. "It also showcases Penn State's teaching, extension, and youth programs."

This year's Ag Progress Days' equine events are dedicated to Skip Sioux, Penn State's longtime leading Quarter Horse sire.

The Equine Exhibits Tent will feature Penn State's Quarter Horses as well as teaching, 4-H, and therapeutic riding and driving programs. Other exhibits and demonstrations will include horse shoeing, horse production and management, breeds and miniature horses. Video presentations will highlight equine education and careers and aspects of the commercial horse industry.

Special attractions and events are scheduled for the Ag Progress Days Horse Arena on all three days of the event.

A Haflinger breed clinic will be held from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 13. Brian Egan, extension assistant in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, will conduct a horse handling clinic from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. Egan will demonstrate techniques for working with horses two years old or younger.

Kyle Shows Steer Nike To Lebanon Beef Champion

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Wearing a Nike T-shirt, Kyle Fleener, 12, son of Tim and Sarah Fleener of Robesonia, won supreme market steer last week at the Lebanon Fair.

Because of his fondness for the sharp, stylish sports logo, the Eastern Lebanon County Middle School 7th grader showed his steer, "Nike," from the heavyweight division, an Angus crossbred weighing 1,325 pounds. Kyle said that he spent every day at the fair taking care of the steer, including a daily "walk and wash." A challenge was getting the steer used to the crowds and the surroundings, he said.

Kyle said the steer was sired by Playboy from the Fleener herd. Kyle won reserve championship at the fair two years ago.

After three years of showing steers, this is his first grand champion. He plans to show at Farm Show.

Show judge Steve Upperman from Chambersburg picked the steer from the light heavyweight division, "Nebuchadnezzar," shown by Ann Leed for reserve champion. Ann, 14, daughter of Bob and Nancy Leed, Myerstown, is in the ninth grade at Eastern Lebanon High School.

The steer is an Angus cross sired by Blazer from the Fleener herd. This is Ann's first year for a champion in the steer show.

Ann has been showing at the fair for six years. She plans to show sheep at the upcoming Keystone International Livestock Exposition, a fair in Flemington, N.J., and at Farm Show.

"It took a lot of hard work and love, and some help from kids from the 4-H club" to win, said Ann.

Before selecting the champions, Upperman pointed out that "70 percent of the retail cuts come from the hind quarters" of the steers raised for the industry. He said he was surprised by the amount of muscling in the hind quarters that all the steers exhibited.

The show itself had one of the largest audiences in recent beef show memory.

Upperman told the exhibitors to remember that the true meaning of the show is to talk to each other and to "share in ideas." This would allow them all to "correct and help each other and look forward to the future." He also told the exhibitors and former 4-H members to "put back into 4-H what you take out," especially in these times of decreased funding.

In all, there were a total of 23 steers and exhibitors.

NEWARK, Del. — On May 6, Lee A. Larochelle joined University of Delaware Cooperative Extension as an extension educator.

Based in Extension's Kent County office, Larochelle will advise and assist livestock producers throughout the state.

Larochelle comes to UD from the College of Technology at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Alfred, where he worked as an assistant professor of livestock production for 15 years. He also served as the college's animal science curriculum coordinator.

At SUNY, Larochelle advised the livestock herdsmen on management practices at the school's livestock facility; taught a variety of courses, including meat science, livestock selection and animal health; and coached the student livestock judging team. In addition, he planned and conducted training workshops and seminars for youth and adult livestock producers.

Larochelle said he is excited about the opportunity to utilize his skills and knowledge as a cooperative extension educator.

"There are many challenges facing the livestock industry, both here in Delaware and nationwide," said Larochelle, "I look forward to serving the needs of the state's livestock producers, 4-H youth, and the general public."

Conserving Natural Resources At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days can get tips on identifying trees, find information on preserving a wetland, or discover how to compost at the Conservation Education Tent from Aug. 13-15.

Buses will depart daily from the Conservation Education Tent on West 11th St. to take visitors on various tours demonstarting conservation techniques.

The compost and milk waste handling tour will run hourly from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.. The tour offers information on recycling manure, milk waste from dairy operations and other materials. Compost will be turned during tours at 10:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. In addition, visitors will see a demonstration of how milk waste can be stored and distributed to a vegetative filtering system that is environmentally safe.

A walking tour concentrating on forestry and wildlife will highlight woodlot management. Topics such as harvesting trees to generate income, forest regeneration, and proper woodland management will be addressed. Participants should dress comfortably for this walking tour, which will run hourly from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The wetlands and stream corridor management tour focuses on how stream crossings and streambank fencing can improve natural waterways. Demonstration sites for constructed and restored wetlands are also featured. Buses leave at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

On the agricultural conservation tour, farm operators can learn how conservation practices can protect soil and improve water quality. Crop residue management, contour stripcropping, waterways, and water diversions will be covered. Buses will leave daily at 11 a.m.

Several workshops will be offered daily. "Our Common Trees" is a tree-identification workshop for elementary and middle-school students and their parents. Another workshop, "BayScapes," teaches environmentally sound landscape management techniques to homeowners in the Chesapeake Bay watershed. A variety of conservation education programs are featured daily in the tent, including presentations on pasture management, white-tailed deer and the use of living cover in crop production.

The schedule includes:

- "BayScapes," workshop, 10 a.m., August 13 only.
- "BayScapes," video, 10 a.m., August 14 and 15.
- Pasture Management, workshop, 11 a.m., 2 p.m. daily.

MONITORING BODY CONDITION IS IMPORTANT TO GRAZIERS

Mike O' Connor
and Larry Muller
Penn State

Consistently maintaining high dry matter intake for cows on pasture is a major challenge to graziers. Not only does low or variable dry matter intake affect milk yield, but it will result in weight loss, especially in early lactation.

Research studies have uniformly shown that cows that fail to consume levels of dry matter after calving lose more weight and body condition, produce less milk and the onset of estrous cycles is significantly delayed. As an example, the table documents the relationship between energy status, body weight loss, dry matter intake, and milk yield with the onset of estrous cycles. Cows were classified into three groups based upon the interval to first ovulation: (1) before 40 days, (2) between 40-60 days, and (3) no evidence of ovulation by 63 days.

The cows that had not cycled by 63 days postpartum consumed less dry matter per day, produced less milk during the first nine weeks, and a larger percentage of the milk that was produced came from body reserves compared to cows that cycled early. Previously, most people believed that high milk yield was the major factor causing anestrus (failure to cycle), However, in this study, energy balance was the major factor.

Onset of Estrous Cycles

Item	Early	Late	Very Late
No. Cows	25	14	15
Days to 1st ovulation	22	43	--
Days to 1st heat	47	73	110
DMI, lb/day	41	39	33
4% milk yield, lb/day	74	70	63
BW change, lb/day	-1.8	-1.8	-2.7
Energey balance, Mcal/day	-4.4	-4.1	-5.6

Average energy balance during the first nine weeks was lower for the anestrous cows (-5.6 Mcal/cow/day) compared to groups 1 and 2, respectively (-4.4 and -4.1 Mcal/cow/day). It was concluded that the more negative energy balance was attributed to the negative energy balance during the first three weeks postpartum. Body weight loss during the first two weeks of lactation was also related to onset of ovarian activity. Cows ovulating earlier lost less body weight than cattle that ovulated later.

Although this information was obtained from research conducted in a conventially fed herd with no pasture, the concepts apply to pastured herds as well. It is much easier to monitor dry matter intake in a convential fed herd. In addition to monitoring milk yield on a regular basis, graziers should take time to score and record body condition throughout the year but especially during the pasture season.

Cattle should be evaluated for body condition at calving, 30 and 60 days into lactation, during mid lactation and at the end of lactation. It is important to record the actual score for each cow at each time period and calculate the average change in condition between each period during lactation. During early lactation cows will generally lost one-half a condition score. A change greater than one-half a point but less than one point on the 1 to 5 scale from calving to 30 days may be a sign of inadequate dry matter or energy intake or a ration imbalance. An average loss greater than one point is more serious and the onset of estrous cycles and conception rate will likely be adversely affected. If the average loss is in excess of one condition score, then several cows must have lost severe weight.

Most of the current information has been obtained from research and field studies with nongrazing cattle. In general, high producing cows in our various grazing studies at Penn State have been lower in body condition score than cows in confinement, and have tended to gain less condition during the grazing season. These trends existed even when grain has been fed with grain to milk ratios of 1 to 4 and 1 to 3. We often hear and see lower than desired body condition in high producing cows on pasture.

This situation indicates an inadequate energy intake and a loss of body reserves to support the high level of milk production. Several factors are likely related to the less than adequate body condition.

1. Inadequate pasture DMI and/or low quality pasture.

2. Extra energy needed for maintenance. Cows that are grazing expend more energy to graze than cows in confinement. This requirement is greater depending on the distances cows walk to and from pasture, the available pasture (cows walk more with sparse pastures), and heat stress. Cows may required from 2 to 4 lb of cornmeal (grain) per day just to meet the energy needs of activity. This maintenance energy can be viewed as a "fixed cost" that must be met before energy is used for milk production.

3. Inadequate supplemental energy to complement the energy intake from pasture.

Although the degree of change in body condition is most important, we should set targets for body condition scores at specified periods. Cows should calve with a score 3+ to 4-. It is important to attain this condition score by the end of the previous lactation and maintain condition during the dry period. If body condition loss and low body condition is the problem, then consider the following:

1. Routinely monitor body condition, record the scores, and make necessary adjustments.

2. Keep the "feed bunk" bull, or in grazing terms, provide adequate available pasture that is high in quality. The major reason to move to a pasture-based system is to utilize as much high quality, low cost pasture as possible. A grazing management system that can maximize DMI and energy intake is the key to the success or failure of a pasture-based system.

3. Provide adequate supplemental energy, particularly to the early lactation cows. This additional energy meets the activity requirement and the energy for milk production and minimizes condition loss. Cows fed only high quality pasture obtain enough energy to produce about 40-45 pounds of milk. In order to obtain milk production close to the genetic potential of the cows, grain is needed at a grain to milk ratio of 1:3 to 1:4 for early lactation cows. Consider added fat, similar to what we do with nongrazed herds. Corn silage is an excellent supplemental forage to provide energy and to compliment the nutrients in pasture. Producers who feed the grain and forage as a TMR can likely expect better utilization of energy and body condition status.

4. During the summer heat stress and pasture slump, consider less grazing to reduce the energy needed for activity and maintenance. Numerous producers have success in the milk pail and with body flesh by just grazing during the cooler evenings, and keep cows in the barn during the day.

Boar Sale During Ag Progress

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center wishes to announce plans are being finalized for Pennsylvania's 21st Performance Tested Boar Sale.

The sale is scheduled for Wednesday evening, Aug. 14, at 6 p.m. This is planned to coincide with Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

There are 57 oustanding boars catalogued for the sale. The top indexing pen of boars is the tremendous pen of Landrace consigned by Grant A. Lazarus III.

This pen of boars recorded an average daily gain of 2.50 pounds per day with a feed efficiency of 2.36 pounds of feed per pound of gain, had an average fat thickness of .54 inches of fat, had an average loin eye area of 6.28 square inches, had an average days to 230 pounds of 131 days and an average final index of 125.

The top-indexing boar in the sale is the Yorkshire bred by Leon Arnold. This boar gained 2.69 pounds per day on test, scanned with a fat thickness of .54 inches of fat and attained 230 pounds in 136 days. This boar's index was a 149 which roughly indicates that this boar is 49 percent better than the average among the 80 boars tested. Keep in mind that these 80 boars were already selected as the best breeders had to offer, effectively making them the very best out of a group of purebred numbering in the thousands.

The entire group of boars on test set a new record for gain on test, with an average daily gain of 2.29 pounds per day. This group of boars also set a new standard for leanness with a group average fat thickness of .60 inches of fat.

This group of boars contained the fastest gaining pen of four boars to ever complete the testing program at the Meat Animal Evaluation Center. This pen of Yorkshire boars was consigned by Franklin and Julie Feeser. The new record set by these boars is on pen average daily gain of 2.76 pounds per day.

This group of boars has already yielded the National Champion tested Berkshire boar at the summer type conference and the national Berkshire Hog College Boar, both from the pen consigned by Greg and Beth Innerst. One of Jim Parletts outstanding Duroc boars is being considered for the Duroc National Hog College Boar as well. The Hog College Boar is the top performance-tested boar of that breed in the counry.

For more information about this record-setting group of boars or to request a sale catalog, contact Glenn Eberly, Director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Rd., State College, PA 16803, (814) 238-2527 or (814) 865-5857 to leave a message or send a fax.

However, the barn must be cooler than the pasture!

In summary, energy intake and the resultant effect on body condition loss or gain and reproductive efficiency is one of the most important management aspects related to the profitability with a grazing system. This is even more imporant for producers considering seasonal calving system where a narrow calving window is most important.

Learn About What Food Pa. Produces At Event

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania has the largest food processing industry in the Northeast and ranks among the top five in the nation. You can learn more about the nation's complex food system at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

The College of Agricultural Sciences Exhibits Building, on West 11th Street at the Ag Progress Day site, will feature the many aspects of Pennsylvania's food system, from the farm gate to the table.

The state's main food products are baked goods, meats, sugar and confections, preserved fruits and vegetables, and dairy products. Pennsylvania has more bakeries than any other state and ranks first in pretzels, potato chips, chocolate, and other confections," said Donald Thompson, associate professor and head of food science at the college. "We rank second in egg processing, ice cream and yogurt, processed meats and pet food."

AG Progress Days
"Penn State AG Science...
We're More Than You Think"

Pennsylvania also leads the nation in mushroom production and is among the top 10 in production of milk, cheese, red meat, poultry, grapes, peaches, apples, cherries, pears, tomatoes, snap beans, and sweet corn.

The economics of the state's food system will be featured in a display showing creation of jobs, the state's proximity to large marketing areas and other aspects of the industry. "Pennsylvania has more than 2,300 food companies, ranging from small businesses to large corporations," said Thompson. "Food-processing has an enormous economic impact in our state."

Pennsylvania's food processing companies employ more than 90,000 workers and create opportunities for warehouses, transportation firms, and other businesses. According to a 1992 Penn State study of 20 leading industries in the commonwealth, food processing accounts for nearly 9 percent of all manufacturing jobs and ranks third in the creation of new jobs.

A display titled "Who is the Middle Man?" will show who some of these workers are and explain how food-processing companies meet customer demand by adding value to fresh produce. "The 'Middle Man' actually is a lot of people, including processors, packagers, employees in transportation and storage companies, and grocery store workers," said Dr. James Dunn, professor of agricultural economics. "Each contributes to the value of food products and each receives a portion of our food dollar."

Also featured will be alternative ways that families can obtain food. "Getting a healthful variety of nutritious foods can be difficult for resource-stressed households," said Dr. Madeleine Sigman-Grant, associate professor of food science. "Our exhibit will show some of the ways that families can get nutritious meals, such as food assistance programs and school breakfasts and lunches.

"One very successful effort in our state is the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) Farmers' Market program, which supplies WIC clients with coupons they can use to buy fresh produce," said Sigman-Grant. "This also has led to the opening of more farmers' markets, giving farmers another outlet for selling fresh produce."

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences has collaborated with agencies across Pennsylvania to establish programs to raise the public's awareness of the food system. Some of these programs will be on display, including Food to Grow, a Pittsburgh-based effort to get organizations and individuals committed to eliminating hunger and poor nutrition; York and Cumberland counties' summer food-systems camps, which teach youth how food is grown, processed and distributed; and various activities in southeast Pennsylvania associated with the Regional Ifrastructure for Sustaining Agriculture.

"Safe, high-quality food is ofteń taken for granted," said Dr. Audrey Maretzki, professor of food science and nutrition. "Everyone depends on the food system, but very few people understand how it works or how we can influence it with our purchases, our support for certain businesses and laws, and our participation in policy discussions about food issues."

Visitors can also learn about KEYSTONE 21 — The Pennsylvania Food Systems Professions Education Program, supported by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation. The program is a partnership among Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and Commonwealth Educational System, the Rodale Institute, and Cheyney University. Directed by Dr. Theodore Alter, interim dean of the college, it is aimed at preparing food system professionals to be responsive to the dynamic and complex food issues of the 21st century.

In addition, visitors can take a self-guided interactive tour that illustrates how a raw commodity, such as a potato, can be harvested, processed and made into a finished product, such as a potato chip. Another display shows how economic value is added to a commodity from the time the crop is planted to the moment a consumer picks up a fresh loaf of bread on a supermarket shelf.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days feature more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs.

MATURE MANAGEMENT ISSUES NEED ATTENTION AND CARE

Charles Abdalla
Associate Professor
Agricultural Economics

In addition to the latest technology and market trends, poultry producers must stay attuned to the changes occurring in communities in which they operate and live. Increasingly, being a viable and profitable business will depend on the acceptance of production practices by neighbors and local jurisdictions.

A key potential area of conflict is manure management. As problems encountered by egg producers over flies in several southeastern Pennsylvania communities have demonstrated, such conflicts can be disruptive and costly — both to the farming and nonfarming community.

Efforts to head off such problems before they occur or address them in a direct manner when they do occur will help individual producers as well as the Pennsylvania poultry industry as a whole.

The rural landscape is changing. More people are moving into the state's rural areas. Much of this population growth has taken place in counties that are leading producers of agricultural commodities. Agriculture is also changing, as producers specialize and increase the size of enterprises to remain profitable. This is particularly true in southeastern and southcentral Pennsylvania, where much of the intensive poultry and livestock production occurs near suburbs and urban centers.

The proximity of people and animals increases tensions and, in some cases, leads to intense conflict over certain aspects of modern animal production. Debate usually centers on manure management issues such as water contamination, offensive odors, and insects. However, the underlying "sense of unease" that some nonfarming residents have includes traffic and safety issues, demands on local services, and changes in the rural landscape that accompanies a more industrialized agriculture.

How change and conflict is handled affects the viability of agriculture in rural communities. Conflict can often catch local decision-makers off-guard. They may be unprepared to deal with the complex issues that can arise and be uncomfortable with the intensity of the exchanges. Decisions to adopt "quick-fix" ordinances under the strain of heated conflict may yield results that no one wants or that are simply unworkable.

Conflicts over manure and related problems from animal agriculture can have significant costs. Penn State Entomologist Charlie Pitts and I have worked in communities where excessive fly hatches have occurred near laying houses. We found that neighbors and local leaders spend much effort trying to investigate a problem's causes and solutions, in addition to the inconvenience and costs to deal with the pests themselves.

Since nuisance issues are not any one agency's responsibility, residents become frustrated when help is inadequate. Angry and frustrated citizens are likely to mount a campaign against the facility that is the "presumed" source of the problem. If civil litigation occurs, legal expenses may be significant and local people will lose control over the outcome.

Finally, conflicts can disrupt community relationships. Disagreements can pit farmer against farmer and neighbor against neighbor. The torn social fabric of a community may never be fully repaired.

One way to reduce or avoid conflict is for farmers and nonfarmers to take action before conflicts develop. From a poultry producer's standpoint, a proactive approach might involve greater attention and care to management and disposal of manure (with the help pf extension specialists and county agents) to reduce fly or other problems. In addition, producers might locate new facilities with greater consideration of where residential growth in their community has or will occur.

An essential ingredient to a proactive approach is a willingness to take steps to keep and build relations with neighbors and the community as it changes. Another Penn State agricultural economist, Tim Kelsey, and I asked 36 farmers who were active in building good neighbor relations what advice they would offer to others. The responses included "get to know your neighbors," "be a good neighbor yourself," "just use common sense (when deciding when to spread manure)," "make your farm attractive," "you don't solve anything by being hard or arrogant," and "be active in your community." (A copy of the publication based on interviews with these farmers, "Good Neighbor Relations: Advice And Tips From Other Farmers," will be available from county extension offices in September.)

When conflicts arise, the issues may be addressed in ways that reduce the risk of dividing the community. Penn State Cooperative Extension offers assistance in helping to resolve conflict over agriculture, land use, and natural resources issues.

One particularly useful method of working through conflict is called the collaborative conflict resolution approach. It is based on the notion that all parties involved in the conflict, meeting in a respectful and open environment, often can develop new and mutually acceptable ways of resolving a conflict. By working together, not just finger pointing, new ideas and ways of dealing with the problem can be generated.

Developing the trust needed to work together is an initial crucial step. This approach offers the potential for greater understanding between farmers and nonfarmers and the promise of finding new solutions that satisfy everyone's interest. It requires honest communication among the concerned groups and a willingness to look at things in new ways.

The collaborative approach to resolving community conflicts has been used to address several conflicts related to animal agriculture. So far results have been good, especially for improving communication among producers and concerned residents and helping the concerned parties arrive at a more accurate and thorough definition of the problem.

For example, Penn State Cooperative Extension has helped to organize a problem-solving committee made up of local leaders, producers, and residents in Codorus Township (York County), to identify and clarify concerns and work toward common goals. In order to better understand concerns about fly problems that prompted an ordinance last year, the group is studying the nature of disposal of manure from laying houses on farm fields and the location of any fly problems.

Extension is helping the group monitor fly traps that will measure the areas of highest fly populations. The results of the fly monitoring should lead to greater agreement about the source of the problem. This improved problem definition should allow technical resources and expertise to be more closely targeted to appropriate solutions for producers with manure management problems. The information should also help local officials to resolve the issues and make more informed choices and tradeoffs.

"Serving Farmers Through Farm Equipment Dealers Since 1961"

Cutting Fall Hay Could Be Costly

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Farmers who need forage for the winter should avoid the temptation of making a cutting from late September through October, said an Ohio State University forage agronomist.

Hay stands may look lush and green, but alfalfa and red clover need a rest in the fall for root systems to store carbohydrates for the winter, said Mark Sulc. Ideally, these forages need a six-week break before the first killing frost, which usually arrives in late October or early November.

Wet weather delayed this year's first hay harvests well into June. Farmers should time their summer cuttings so the last harvest of the season is in early September. Southern Ohio farmers should finish by Sept. 15, and central and northern producers even earlier, Sulc said.

"This means most people probably will only be able to get three cuttings of hay this year," he said.

Hay cut from late September through October will regrow and use energy that should be saved for the winter, Sulc said. Research shows that the forage gained from a fall cutting is typically lost in the first cutting the following spring.

"That's the best case scenario," Sulc said. "If we have another bad winter like this past year, you could lose your whole stand."

Fields cut late are more likely to heave, Sulc said. Even with a mild winter, farmers can expect up to one-half ton per acre less hay from the first spring harvest after a fall cutting.

Producers badly needing hay for animals during the winter should weigh the need for hay versus the potential winter damage and lower spring yields caused by late cutting, Sulc said. These are the circumstances that may minimize the risk of injury from an extra fall cutting:

- Wait to cut after the killing frost (temperatures of 25 F or less for several hours) in late October or early November. If cut that late, the forage won't begin to regrow, so energy will not be lost for the winter. But, avoid fields with heavy-textured, poorly drained soils subject to heaving. Top-growth is needed to moderate soil surface temperatures and reduce freeze-thaw action that can uproot plants and kill a stand.
- Select well-drained fields with optimum pH and high fertility levels, especially potassium. Select fields planted with winter-hardy varieties.
- Do NOT harvest fields seeded this past spring or summer.
- Allow 45 days of growth before taking a fall cutting. This allows carbohydrate buildup that helps to lower, but not eliminate, risk.
- A third cutting during the fall is less risky than a fourth one. Plants are bound to be more rested under less intensive cutting schedules and are better able to withstand the stress of fall cutting.
- Hay fields with severe potato leafhopper injury this summer are weak and should not be harvested in the fall.

This is not a good year for fall cutting, Sulc said. Many alfalfa stands were weak or injured coming out of the winter, then were further stressed with a wet spring and dry summer.

"All this stress tends to weaken the plant's root system," he said. "The crop really needs the rest period this fall if it is to be saved for production next year."

Family Health, Safety Issues At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — A shortage of health care facilities and rising medical costs, when combined with the especially hazardous nature of farming occupations, make rural health and safety a priority for Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

This year, for the first time, the college will highlight a collection of new and established health programs at the Health and Safety for Rural Families Tent at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

"The tent gives visitors an opportunity to learn about the health- and safety-related programs offered by the college," said Lisa Davis, coordinator of the Pennsylvania Office of Rural Health. Although health programs have been featured at previous Ag Progress Days, this is the first year they all will be in one area. Twelve programs will be featured, covering issues such as nutrition, child care, cancer detection and education, tobacco control, exercise for the elderly, support for farmers with disabilities, and the availability of primary health care services.

"We wanted to show the many ways the college and Penn State Cooperative Extension work to promote the health of rural families," said Ann Ward, manager of the Northern Appalachia Leadership Initiative on Cancer. The tent also will feature craft activities for children, a treasure hunt, free sunscreen lotion and visors, and a rest area with educational videos and free cold drinks.

Davis will provide information about the Pennsylvania Office of Rural Health's efforts to improve primary health care services in rural Pennsylvania. Ward and several extension agents will provide information on early detection of breast, cervical, prostate, and skin cancer.

J. Lynne Brown, associate professor of food science, will provide information on how to use the nutritious facts panel on food products to reduce the risk of developing diabetes and how to compare facts to make more healthful food choices.

Judith Heald, program manager of Pennsylvania's Expanded Food and Nutrition Program, will share information about how low-income families, especially those with small children, can have a healthful diet using limited resources.

Also featured will be "My New Weigh of Life," a weight management program that helps participants maintain weight loss through appropriate food selection and increased physical activity.

Ruth Henderson from Hershey Medical Center will showcase the Pennsylvania Agromedicine Program, a partnership of medical and agricultural professionals that provides information on reducing or eliminating illnesses associated with the hazards of agricultural production.

Betsy Winger, education coordinator for the Central Pennsylvania Poison Center, will distribute poison prevention information and Mr. Yuk! stickers used to alert adults and children to poisonous products.

Douglas Schaufler, senior project associate at Penn State, will discuss how AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians, part of a national information and technology network, can help farmers, farm workers, and family members with disabilities continue to farm.

Alan Snider, professor of agricultural and extension education, will present information on the Community Coalitions for Tobacco-Free Youth. James Van Horn, professor of rural sociology, will display materials and information about Penn State's Better Kid Care Project, which provides support material for day care centers and education for parents on selecting quality child care.

Dan Lago, extension specialist on adult development and aging, will exhibit video and print materials from "Well at Home," a new extension program to help elderly people live independently through improved nutrition and regular exercise.

Karen Burke-Crawford from Family Health Services in Bellefonte will answer questions about Healthy Women 50+, a free mammography and pap test program.

Field demonstrations at Ag Progress Days provide a good place for farmers to see competing equipment of various makes working side by side. The more than 300 exhibitors with new machinery, products, and services will again provide the backbone of the show to be held at Penn State's Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring. The theme again this year is "Penn State Ag Sciences: We're More Than You Think!"

Latest Technology Awaits Visitors To Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Modern agriculture is a rapidly changing science. For today's producers to stay competitive, they must keep up with the latest technology and practices.

Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15, can find information on the latest equipment and cutting-edge techniques all in one convenient location, said Robert Oberheim, Ag Progress Days manager.

"Ag Progress Days is one-stop shopping for farmers," Oberheim said. "Here you can see and compare the latest machinery, goods and services from several different vendors in the space of a few hours. Back home, it might take days or weeks to get the same information."

More than 300 commercial exhibitors will set up displays at Ag Progress Days. Their wares range from tractors and other heavy machinery to seed, feed, fertilizer, insurance, consulting services, small power equipment, and many other products.

Those in the market for a new tractor also can test-drive some of the newest models at Ag Progress Days. A tractor ri' ud-dri' area will enable farmers to try out tractors from four leading farm equipment manufacturers as well as a "Hummer" vehicle.

Several field demonstrations will show the latest agricultural machinery in action. Visitors will see no-till tomato planting, including an evaluation of yields under different growing conditions; spring wheat combine harvesting; mowing; round silage baling; and round bale handling.

Machinery accidents are the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths. Another demonstration will feature remote-controlled full-scale machinery being operated under typical conditions. By observing mishaps involving equipment, visitors will learn the causes and effects of machinery accidents and how to avoid them.

Other exhibits will feature information and workshops on the latest research-based production techniques, government programs and regulations, and various educational initiatives, ranging from health and safety to protecting the Chesapeake Bay.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free until August 15. Or, on the Internet, visit Ag Progress Days on the World Wide Web: http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/CASHOME/APD/APD.HTML.

STRESS-FREE ROW CROP GUIDANCE

- Unique design keeps the implement parallel with the rows even when the tractor moves laterally as it drifts off course. Most other systems oversteer the toolbar which adds damaging side pressure to the stabilizing coulters.
- Automatically compensates for sidehill drift.
- Eliminates excessive pull and stress on hydraulic components associated with other guidance systems.
- Very few moving parts provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement.
- Works effectively on all conventional and ridge-till cultivators, planters and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.

Weather Boosts Intercropping System

COLUMBUS, Ohio — This year's unfavorable weather conditions may give a little-known yet efficient farming technique a boost of recognition among farmers.

Ohio State University researchers are taking advantage of the overly wet conditions to demonstrate the effectiveness of Modified Relay Intercropping (MRI), a system in which soybeans are interplanted into standing wheat.

"The concept of intercropping itself is not a new practice, but has not been a consistently good practice," said Steve Prochaska of OSU Extension in Crawford County. "Modified Relay Intercropping is a different approach."

Unlike relay intercropping in which soybeans are planted into standing wheat in May, MRI involves planting soybeans into wheat in June at or past the heading stage of growth — 20-35 days prior to harvest.

That planting date lets the soybean plant grow 6-8 inches by wheat harvest.

"MRI allows farmers to hedge production risk by growing two crops in one year. This year's weather patterns have given us the perfect opportunity to show farmers that the technique works," said Prochaska. "While some farmers without MRI are tearing up their wheat crop with very little profit, those with MRI are assured that they have soybeans to fall back on if their wheat crop fails."

MRI, which has been practiced for over five years, is not widely recognized by Ohio farmers. Prochaska said only 2 percent to 5 percent of the state's farmers use the system.

"Many are skeptical about the fact that you can drill soybeans 3 feet through standing wheat and not injure the crop, buy you can," he said. "Also, many farmers think they need special equipment to utilize the system, but they can use regular farm equipment."

In addition to better utilizing farm labor, time and equipment, MRI lowers fixed costs for land and machinery, increases crop profitability and is environmentally friendly, said Prochaska.

A recent report released by the Crawford County Extension Office shows that with variable costs (seed, fertilizer, herbicide, repairs) and fixed costs (land and machinery), a typical budget in total costs per acre for wheat and soybeans in the MRI system is $168 and $155, respectively.

By comparison, the total costs per acre for wheat and soybeans in a monoculture is $226 and $242, respectively.

"One interesting fact to note is that with the MRI system, 2,4-D ester is the only herbicide used for the production of both crops, which makes it environmentally and economically favorable," said Prochaska. "Modified Relay Intercropping also reduces soil erosion and improves water quality."

Prochaska said Modified Relay Intercropping also takes advantage of the wheat plant's adaptability to stresses during its life cycle.

"We have to slightly widen the rows from the normal 7 inches to between 10 and 15 inches when we interplant the soybeans," he said. "But the wheat is remarkable at adapting, and research by Jim Beuerlein (Ohio State agronomist) shows that there is only a three bushel differenct between 7 and 14 inches. So we are not taking a yield penalty."

It's now too late this year for farmers to interplant soybean and wheat. The last date to intercrop wheat is when stems begin to break.

But Prochaska said farmers who use the MRI system successfully intercropped through June 22.

Ethics Symposium Announced

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — In keeping with its history of addressing issues of concern in animal agriculture, the Livestock Conservation Institute will facilitate a Youth Livestock Program Ethics Symposium Dec. 6-8 at the Hyatt Regency in Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas.

The symposium, designed to help livestock show competitors, educators and others deal with the problem of isolated unethical activities, is the second such symposium facilitated by LCI. The first, held last December, attracted some 250 representatives of animal agriculture from more than 40 states.

This year's symposium will include two "Super Sessions" (one each on Saturday and Sunday) keying on the topics "Adult Involvement — What's Excessive?" and "Jackpot Shows — How to Make Them Part of the Solution."

The symposium which begins with the opening general session on Friday evening, Dec. 6, will also include break-out sessions on individual youth livestock issues and workshops that will include information about innovative programs that are addressing ethical issues. LCI is facilitating the symposium in cooperation with the American Farm Bureau Federation, the American Veterinary Medical Association, the Animal Industry Foundation, the National FFA Organization, the USDA Cooperative Extension Program (4-H) and other key agricultural organizations.

Information on registering for the symposium will be available soon. For more information, call LCI at (502) 782-9798.

Gen-Rich Farms Shows Supreme At Troy Fair Holstein Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — "Life up in Troy is cows," said Judge Ron Heffner of Jefferson, Md. as he completed his final class for the day.

"Keep on breeding the good cows. Keep the tradition going — you're mighty proud people."

Heffner was commenting on the nearly 200 head of Holsteins brought out by the people of Troy and all of Bradford County for the 1996 Troy Fair Open Holstein Show held recently at the fairgrounds.

His pick for grand champion and ultimately the supreme champion of the day was Gen-Rich Vintage Destiny, a junior 3-year-old owned by Gen-Rich Farms of Columbia Cross Roads.

Seated in the reserve grand champion position was Lynn and Bonnie Miller's 4-year-old, Royal Haven Inspire Quill. The Millers

Do-It-Yourselfers Can Build On Composite Wood Knowledge

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Despite the best efforts of Bob Vila, "This Old House," and even "Home Improvement's" Tim Allen, many homeowners and weekend project mavens are clueless when it comes to choosing wood materials.

Although most people know what a two-by-four is, many lumberyards are selling what experts call composite wood products, which are lumber substitutes made from smaller pieces of wood. Roy Adams, associate professor of wood products in Penn State's School of Forest Resources, said that composite wood products are continually improving as solid lumber becomes scarcer and wood adhesives improve. These manufactured products are changing the lumber industry and may one day even replace the 2-by-4.

"Composite woods became popular in the '40s and '50s during the post-war building boom," Adams said. "Because you can't get a 4-by-8 sheet of wood out of a tree, lumber mills on the West Coast made softwood plywood out of Douglas fir, and later Southern mills made it from yellow pine."

Adams explains that plywood is made by removing thin sheets of wood called veneers. These veneers are then glued together to form a solid sheet. Typically, softwood plywood is used for roofing and wall sheathing, but plywood's strength makes it perfect for other projects.

"Plywood is good for shelving, or making benches because it is very strong along its length," Adams said. "Depending on your budget and the project, you can also buy decorative plywood that is made from hardwoods or plywood made with high quality veneers that can be stained."

Because of timber-cutting restrictions, plywood has become more expensive in recent years, opening the market for a product called oriented strand board. This product, also sold in 4-by-8-foot panels to the do-it-yourself market, uses thin strands of wood that are glued and compressed into a solid panel.

"The oriented strand board industry was developed in Minnesota and Michigan to use wood from aspen trees, which dominate their forests," Adams said. "It has many of the same qualities as plywood except the surface is not as smooth. You can use it for many of the same projects."

Two other composite products, particleboard and medium density fiberboard (MDF), are not used as much for home projects. Particleboard is made from small wood chips that are glued and compressed into panels. MDF is made from small wood and is more homogenous and finely grained than particleboard.

"Particleboard and MDF have major markets in the furniture industry because they provide a smooth surface for wood and plastic veneers," Adams said. "The bending strength of these composites is less than plywood because the wood chips are small. For example, shelving made from particle board tends to bend under heavy weight."

Adams said these composite wood materials do not hold screws recommends painting or staining any composite wood product that is used outdoors. "Composites use waterproof adhesives, but water always will get into the product and cause it to fall apart eventually," he said.

Another product found in home centers is called hardboard, which is a high-density fiberboard. Hardboard is used for pegboard or as a backing material for less expensive paneling products.

Do-it-yourselfers also can look for grades stamped onto every sheet of composite wood to be used in a structure. The grade stamp, controlled by the APA/Engineered Wood Association, will tell the consumer what applications the product can be used for.

Adams said other composite products will become more common as timber-cutting restrictions increase. Composite wood I-beams are already used by professional contractors to replace lengthy 2-by-12 floor joists. A product called timber strand lumber, made from long strands of wood, may take the place of 2-by-8, 2-by-6 and perhaps even 2-by-4 lumber.

AG Progress Days

"Penn State AG Science... We're More Than You Think"

Answers To Landscape, Gardening At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — This year's long winter and cold spring damaged many landscape plants. Whether you're a homeowner, gardener, or professional grower, Penn State faculty and cooperative extension agents can help solve your plant problems at this year's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

The Landscape, Lawn and Garden Tent will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday and from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Advice will be available on indoor and outdoor plants, turf, flowers, tree fruit, small fruit and vegetables, as well as control of plant-damaging insects and other pests.

Visitors may bring in plant samples for the experts to examine. These samples can be disposed of at the tent. "To get a clear idea of the problem, we need a large sample in good condition," said Dr. Gary Moorman, professor of plant pathology. "It's best to bring samples that represent various stages of the problem, and to bring insects in jars, since damage alone may be hard to diagnose."

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tour, and machinery demonstrations.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free from July 15 to August 15.

Among the junior animals, the summer yearling caught the judge's eye as he moved Norkval Encore Laser, owned by Linda and Gerald Kisner of New Albany, into the champion spot.

Following close behind the summer yearling was Lynn and Bonnie Miller's senior calf, Royal Haven Stardust Baton, who was named the reserve junior champion.

Taking both the premier breeder and the premier exhibitor banners for the day was Pack-Herd Holsteins, the Packard family.

Ag Progress Features Developments In Animal Ag

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — New developments in beef production, dairy farming, and other aspects of Pennsylvania's livestock industry will be highlighted at the dairy and livestock tents at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

The tents feature educational exhibits and demonstrations by businesses, breed associations, and Penn State researchers in veterinary science and dairy and animal science. Displays include subjects relating to swine, sheep, and dairy and beef cattle.

"The livestock tents give people an opportunity to meet with Penn State faculty and staff to learn about research and get answers to questions about livestock production," said Dr. Ken Kephart, associate professor of animal science and coordinator for the dairy and livestock tents.

Dr. Clair Engle, associate professor of animal science, will present the latest results of grazing research projects, including information about how producers may be able to maximize animal and plant production levels by using chicory in grazing programs.

Dr. Michael O'Connor, professor of dairy science, will be on hand to discuss the latest developments in estrous synchronization of cattle, a management tool for boosting reproductive efficiency in dairy herds. Dr. Robert Graves, professor of agricultural engineering, will provide information about livestock housing planning materials available from the College of Agricultural Sciences.

"It is very important to plan a livestock building to meet the needs of your animals," Graves said, "You must be sure that the animals' basic needs — fresh air, adequate feed space, clean resting areas, and many others — can be easily met."

Dr. Lisa Holden, assistant professor of animal science, will provide information about DairyMAP, a series of workshops designed to help producers use general business management techniques to improve the profitability of dairy farming. Also on hand will be John Rutherford, DairyMAP's western regional director.

Dr. Larry Specht, professor of dairy science, will discuss record-keeping for dairy businesses and genetic progress among different breeds of milking cattle.

Dr. Dale Moore, research associate in veterinary science, will discuss "Team Dairy." This new extension initiative focuses on dairy production problems by combining the expertise of many Penn State departments, including dairy and animal science, veterinary science, agricultural and biological engineering, agronomy, and agricultural economics and rural sociology.

Dr. Dale Olver, instructor, and Dr. Erskine Cash, professor of animal science, will share information about the Department of Dairy and Animal Science with prospective students.

Maryland Holds State FFA Convention

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — The 68th Annual Maryland State FFA Convention was held on June 18-19, here at the Ramada Inn.

More than 350 FFA members and guests participated in convention activities, including delegate sessions, committee meetings, leadership contests, and chapter competitions.

The convention activities were directed by the 1995-1996 State FFA Officer Team.

Special activities of the convention include presentations by the National FFA Vice-President Andy McCall and the retiring addresses of the state officers. Other activities included the Record Book Awards Program sponsored by Maryland Farm Bureau and the American Royal Ambassador Scholarship Program sponsored by the Farm Credit Banks.

Recognition of individual FFA members included state agriculture degree. State proficiency award winners included Dana Bollinger of Catoctin (beef production) Melissa Willard of Catoctin (div. livestock production), Mark Valentine of Catoctin (dairy production), Zachary Parker of Frederick CTC (emerging ag technology), and Mark Michael Clear Spring (vegetable production) and American FFA Degree Candidate Richard O'Hara of Linganore High.

Honorary Agriculturist Degree recipients included Robert Valentine, Sue Lowery, John Peckyno, and State President Laah Broadwater.

Two special VIP awards were presented to recognize outstanding contributions to the Maryland FFA Association. Dr. Boyd Robinson of the Maryland FFA Foundaion, Inc. noted that "the generosity of Maryland's agricultural industry and agricultural organizations in providing financial support for the sponsorship of the various FFA contests is genuinely appreciated by FFA members across the state."

The American Royal Ambassador Contest has been one of the highlights of the annual State FFA Convention in the past. This year that contest included both male and female contestants who were interviewed on Tuesday moring and winners were announced during the American Royal Ambassador Dance that evening.

This year's American Royal Ambassador candidates who will represent Maryland at Kansas City in the American Royal Ambassador Contest are Tracey Clagett of the South Carroll FFA Chapter and David O'Hara of the Linganore FFA Chapter. As state winners they will each receive a $500 scholarship from the Farm Credit Bank.

Current Perspectives On Calf Housing

Jason Karszes
Cornell Cooperative Extension,
Erie And Wyoming Counties
Kathy Barrett
Cornell Cooperative Extension
Cayuga County

Calves and heifers need housing that allows them to grow and develop profitably.

Dairy farmers have tried everything from intensively managed facilities to using pasture and trees. It seems every dairy publication has at least one article on heifer management.

With all this information it becomes a challenge to decide what would work best on your farm. Whatever your situation, some basic factors need to be taken into consideration when choosing housing for calves. These factors include how you're grouping your calves, housing principles for that group, and cost considerations.

Calves can be separated into three groups based on age and stage of development: birth to four weeks, four weeks to weaning, and a transition period (weaning to 350 pounds). Housing principles that pertain to all the groups include ample ventilation, easy manure removal, labor efficiency, and good disease control.

It is impossible to consider and compare housing systems without discussing costs. Following are the reasons for categorizing calves into these groups and specific housing objectives for the group.

Birth To 4 Weeks

Reasons for period grouping:

- Allow newborns to develop immunity
- Reduce susceptibility to stress, increase resistance to diseases
- Allow adaptation to environment
- Nutrient requirements mainly met with milk source, while increasing reliance on dry feeds
- Cryotosporidium parvum and Giardia may be active as pathogens in the calf and present in the manure (both can cause human sickness).

Specific Housing Principles

- Prevent contact between calves and other animals.

Cost Considerations

- Outdoor hutches: $100 (plywood) up to $300 per commercial hutch, plus site preparation
- Shelter with hutches: $250 to $350 per stall (hutch) including labor, plus site preparation
- Enclosed environmentally controlled facility: $600-$1,000 per stall (Note: Less expensive with renovated older facilities, but need to provide ample ventilation.).

Calf Pen (Hutch) Dimensions

- Birth to 4 weeks 3-foot to 4-foot and 5-foot to 7-foot long
- 4 to 8 weeks 3 1/2-foot to 4-foot wide and 5-foot to 7-foot long.

Four Weeks To Weaning

Reasons for period grouping:

- Nutrient requirements met with dry feeds and milk source
- Preparing calf for weaning (4-8 weeks) calf is healthy and growing calf is consuming good quality calf starter (and hay)
- Continue developing immunity, increase resistance to diseases, and reduce susceptibility to stress
- Cryotosporidium parvum and Giardia may be active as pathogens in the calf and present in the manure (both can cause human sickness).

Specific Housing Principles

- Provide clean and dry area for individually housed calves
- If desired, calves can be housed in small groups of 5- 12 calves, but need to provide well-managed group micro-environment.

Super Hutch Dimensions

- Bedded pack area: 10 to 15 square feet per calf plus feeding area.

Cost considerations:

$1000 to $3000 per group hutch (super hutch) of 5-8 calves

Transition period (weaning to 350 pounds).

Reasons For Period Grouping

- Adjustment to a more competitive group environment
- Adjustment to different environmental conditions
- Adjustment to non-milk source ration
- Adjustment to accelerated body growth
- Cryotosporidium parvum and Giardia are present in the heifers environment up to six months of age.

Specific Housing Principles

- Provide clean and dry bedded pack micro-environment for groups (5 to 12 animals per group)
- Prevent overcrowding to prevent excessive competition.

Bedded Pack Dimensions

- Bedded pack area: 20 square feet per calf plus feeding area.
- Cost considerations: New facilities: $5 to $8 per square foot of building.

Once calves have been successfully reared through the transition stage and are eating a non-milk ration, the housing options can include open areas, bedded packs, counterslopes, and freestalls.

More Than 100 Entries At Troy Fair Colored Breed Show

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co.) — Bill Eick and Wee Three Farm will share the title of premier exhibitor for the coming year, but the Eick family has the title of the premier breeder all to itself.

The banners were presented to the Jersey breeders at the conclusion of the Troy Fair Open Colored Breed Show held at the Troy Fair recently.

Bill Taylor of Marcellus, N.Y. had the distinction of judging more than 100 Jerseys, Guernseys, Ayrshires, and Brown Swiss at the show.

Earning the title of grand champion Ayrshire was Melissa Hillyard's Toll-Gate-Ayr Super Die, an aged cow, who also earned the honor of being named the reserve supreme champion of the Troy Fair. The reserve grand champion was Karen Neville's Locust Lane Amos Blizzard, a junior 3-year-old.

In the Brown Swiss Show, junior 3-year-olds were the pick of the day as Heather Yurkanin had the grand champion with Elm

The Eick family was named premier breeder of the Troy Fair Jersey Show, but there was a tie for the premier exhibitor banners between the Eicks and Wee Three Farms. Pictured with both banners are Judge Bill Taylor, Christine Eick, Bill Eick, and Bradford County Dairy Princess Robin Wilson.

Bradford County Dairy Princess Robin Wilson presented the champion Ayrshire awards to Tony Carter with the reserve junior champion, Kathy Hillyard with the junior champion, Karen Neville with the reserve grand champion, and Melissa Hillyard with the grand champion.

One and only Guernsey shown by Lucas Trowbridge was named the Guernsey champion. That animal was a spring calf, Shale Hill Perfect Nola.

The Jersey Show made up the majority of the animals at the annual show. Nobledale Farm took both the grand and reserve grand champion positions with their 2-year-olds. Nobledale Observer Very, a junior 2-year-old, wore the ribbons of the grand champion, while Nobledale Fiddle Corrine, a senior 2-year-old, was named the reserve grand champion.

Veal Association Revises QA Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Prompted by requests from veal producers and other industry segments, the Veal Quality Assurance Program (VQAP) has been revised and intensified. Of the changes, the most important is the veal quality certification of producers and of veal input suppliers.

Producers complete two levels of certification. Certification at level I indicates the veal producer has met certain preventive care measures and has established a valid, working relationship with a veterinarian as a resource in making decisions and in complying with federal regulations. For certification, producers must keep thorough records on animal health care product use, calf health and treatment records, document repairs on production facilities and equipment, and use high quality supplies. Biosecurity measures are also considered, incorporating the use of all-in, all-out production systems, more intensive selection of calves, and proper obtaining and use of health care products. Consideration is given to the facility's effectiveness in maintaining air and water quality inside and outside the production unit.

The new VQAP provides veal input suppliers with certification of practically all materials used in veal production, including milk replacer feeds, premixes, and animal health care products. According to Michael J. Trapp, VQAP committee chairman and president-elect of the American Veal Association (AVA), "Producers wanted a certification program not only for themselves, but also for the suppliers of the different materials used in veal production. Although the program was just initiated in February 1996, we have 38 certified suppliers, and over 500 certified Level I producers who plan to complete Level II within the next few months. Our goal is to have over 75 percent of the active veal producers achieve certified Level II status by January 1, 1997. It seems as though we may well reach this rather ambitious goal."

Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science at Penn State University and technical adviser to the VQAP, summed up the changes. "The original VQAP had a model which emphasized the importance of animal producers in the food production and distribution system — which was quite appropriate. I believe this responsiblity has been accepted by practically all veal producers and those involved with the production and distribution of other animal-derived foods. Our new VQAP program is based on two concepts: dedicated to excellence — and quality assurance is market assurance. It is obvious that the veal industry has accepted all three of these concepts and is paying close attention to the requirements set forth in the revised VQAP."

The VQAP is funded by the National Beef Promotion and Research Board, and administered jointly by the AVA, Harrisburg, and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, Denver, Colo. For information contact Mike Schlegel, VQAP coordinator, American Veal Association, 4714 Orchard Street, Harrisburg, PA 17109, (717) 545-6000.

Get The Buzz On Beating Bugs That Bite

NEWARK, Del. — Are you dreading the high-pitched whine and itchy red welts that signal summer time is here?

While mosquitoes may be unwelcome harbingers of summer, you may unwittingly be encouraging them to take up residence in your backyard, said Maggie Moor, cooperative extension educator with Delaware State University.

In all of their life stages, explains Moore, mosquitoes need water. The adult females lay their eggs on the water surface. The larvae hatch and live in water; they cannot survive long without it. The comma-shaped pupae stay on the water surface until they develop into adults.

Since mosquitoes rely on standing water to reproduce, any place in your yard that collects water — such as a swimming pool, rain barrel, or open container — can be a major attraction. By eliminating these ideal breeding conditions, you can reduce your backyard mosquito population without resorting to pesticides.

Moore recommends the following strategies:

- Discard old tires, buckets, and containers that can accumulate water.
- Flush weekly birdbaths and wading pools with clean water.
- Make sure your swimming pool filter system is working.
- Remove rotting trees and stumps that collect water.
- Repair roof gutters that drain poorly.
- Keep all door and window screens in good repair.
- Stay indoors at dusk, when mosquitoes are most active.

For more information on mosquitoes, contact your local cooperative extension office.

Programs For Children, Families At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Children and adults can handle an insect, compete in a science-based game show, listen to the tales of a storyteller, and take a hands-on tour of agriculture's rich historical past at Ag Progress Days, Aug. 13-15.

An insect exhibit hosted by Penn State's entomology department in the Family and Youth Exhibits Building will reveal the secrets of our planet's most populous and varied life form. Visitors will go buggy at the insect zoo, featuring cockroaches, large walking sticks, mantises and large lubber grasshoppers. Several other insect exhibits, such as a feeding and experiment station, also will be featured, and youngsters can learn how to start their own insect collection.

Computers have become integrated into our lives so quickly that some folks can't keep up with society's technological changes. The College of Agricultural Sciences offers an easily understood journey into the world of computer mouses and digital interfaces at the computer awareness area in the Youth Building. Experts in the college's computer services department will lead visitors through a computer database in search of tasty recipes, instruct users in the world of multimedia programs and guide classes on a tour of the World Wide Web, as well as Penn State's PENpages information service.

Storyteller Jan Kinney will perform in the College Exhibits Building Theater at noon each day. Kinney has been writing and collecting stories for more than 50 years and can spin any one of 200 tales for audiences of all ages.

In an era of trash compactors and gourmet coffee makers, the artifacts displayed at the Pasto Agricultural Museum may seem like ancient history. However, once visitors discover a dog-powered treadmill that was used to wash clothes or a milking machine designed to be pedaled, they appreciate the ingenuity of yesterday's agricultural tools. The museum houses such items as iceboxes, tools, mechanized apple peelers, a vintage cream separator and an ornamental drinking fountain for chicks. The museum is located opposite the main barn.

Adults and children can test their knowledge of Pennsylvania's food system by competing in SciQ, a TV-style quiz show with a recipe for fun food facts. SciQ will be held daily in the College Exhibits Building Theatre. There will be a special children's version of SciQ Wednesday at 4:30 p.m. in the theatre.

The Penn State chapter of Students for the Responsible Use of Animals will display young calves, lambs, pigs and other livestock next to the Family and Youth Building. Visitors can see the animals and ask Penn State students questions on how farm animals are used in agriculture and the food system.

AG Progress Days

"Penn State AG Science... We're More Than You Think"

Shaver's Creek Environmental Center also will display live owls, hawks, turtles, snakes and wildlife materials at its nearby tent. 4-H and the Foundation for Better Living offer displays and activities for children as well.

Many kids love power equipment, and acres of big tractors, harvesters and other machines will be exhibited at Ag Progress Days. More than 300 commercial and noncommercial exhibitors will give curious visitors a chance to take a look at the latest in agricultural technology.

Everyone needs to eat, and adults and children alike will be fascinated by the displays outlining Pennsylvania's role in the food system. In the College Exhibits Building, visitors can take a self-guided interactive tour that illustrates how a raw commodity, such as a potato, can be harvested, processed and made into a finished product, such as a potato chip. In addition, budget-minded visitors can see how economic value is added to a commodity from the time a crop of wheat is planted to the moment a consumer picks up a fresh loaf of bread on a supermarket shelf. For those who want to ask questions about growing vegetables or flowers, Penn State faculty and extension staff will be available to give advice at the Landscape, Lawn and Garden tent, next to the Exhibits Building. Plant and insect samples can be brought to the tent for identification or diagnosis.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free until Aug. 15. If you have access to the Internet, visit Ag Progress Days on the World Wide Web: http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/CASHOME/APD/APD.HTML.

New Farm Software At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Nutrient Solutions in Agriculture will be offering hands-on demonstrations of a new farm computer software program at Ag Progress Days, West Sixth Street, on Aug. 13-15. The new program, called the Nutrient Management Planner, combines the easy-to-use Windows environment with sophisticated field-by-field recordkeeping and profit-building on-farm nutrient recommendation tools.

This program was created and designed by NSIA, a leading provider of soil testing and nutrient management planning services in the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast, to help farmers and agribusinesses obtain profit-building, environmentally safe, fertilizer and manure use recommendations for each of their fields by inputting animal herd, manure storage, manure spreading, fertilizer use, crop rotation, and soil test data into the program. Farmers make fertilizer and manure spreading recommendations with their own computers rather than having to rely on outside sources for this information.

The program is capable of storing this data for multiple years, enabling a farmer to keep an ongoing history of this important information at his fingertips for review at any time. The Planner will allow growers to make quick changes to crop rotations in spring when weather or other unforeseen factors come into play and he can quickly know the nutrient status and fertilizer needs of the field under the new crop rotations. The program can also be used to help farmers who are using rotational grazing practices to easily see the nutrient value of deposited manure and net nutrient needs for each pasture area.

A key feature of the program is a screen which assesses the risk level for spreading manure on a given field based on its slope, nearness to neighbors, etc. Farmers can use the Nutrient Management Planner software to print selected tabulated information or at the click of a button produce a professionally assembled nutrient management plan, including all necessary data tables and text sections.

Forage, Crops Information At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Visitors to Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 13-15, can learn about crop production and management, soil fertility and testing, nutrient management, pest control, weed identification and more in the Crop and Soil Science Tent and demonstration plots located at the end of East 5th Street.

"This year's plot demonstrations will feature weed control, soybean varieties, Round-up-resistant soybeans, Bt corn, and forage grass species for hay production and grazing," said Dr. Marvin Hall, associate professor of agronomy and coordinator for the tent.

Farmers can visit the "Ask the Experts" booth to find solutions to problems with soil fertility, diseases, insects, corn, forages, small grains, and tillage practices. Specialists from Penn State's agronomy, entomology, and plant pathology departments and the Pennsylvania Crop Management Association will be on hand to share research results and answer questions.

Visitors to the Crop and Soil Science Tent also can test their knowledge using an agronomy quiz board, with questions about small grains, soybeans, corn, forage, and soil fertility.

Also at this site will be the Hay Show, with displays of the state's best hay samples. Growers who would like to enter the show are invited to bring samples to the Hay Show drop-off point near the Ag Progress Days east entrance on the morning of Aug. 13. All growers will receive the results of their hay's evaluation.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days features more than 500 acres of educational and commercial exhibits, tours, and machinery demonstrations. It is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45, Aug. 13-15. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, with extended hours of 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll free from July 15 to August 15.

Guinn To Head ASA International Marketing

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. — ASA Chief Executive Officer Stephen Censky has named James M. Guinn to head the international marketing department of the American Soybean Association (ASA), a position previously held by Censky.

"Jim's dedication, his knowledge of ASA's international programs and the respect he has earned from farmers, industry and his colleagues bear witness to why he was selected to lead ASA's international marketing effort," Censky said.

As executive director for international marketing, Guinn will manage a $22 million market development program designed to increase demand for U.S. soybeans and soybean products, which last year totaled nearly $8 billion in exports. Reporting to Guinn will be a staff of 11 located at ASA's Saint Louis headquarters, in addition to more than 90 foreign-based staff and consultants located in 12 overseas offices who work in 77 countries worldwide. Guinn has worked for ASA more than 10 years, most recently as deputy director, international marketing, after serving seven years as technical director of quality programs.

Guinn also worked as ASA marketing manager for Central Europe located Vienna, Austria. Prior to joining ASA, Guinn was plant manager for Bunge Corporation at their largest U.S. export facility located in Destrehan, La., which handles soybeans, wheat, corn, and sorghum. Bunge also processed soybeans at this location. Guinn, originally from Erwin, Tenn., received his bachelor's degree in economics from Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa, N.C.

R52. Engineered For Better Returns.

The R52 may be the middle child, but it's not shy when it comes to delivering powerful performance. Like its other GLEANER® combine brothers, the R52 has many of the same rugged characteristics. In fact, about the only way you can tell these combines apart is by their bin capacity. The 225-bushel or optional 245-bushel grain tank makes this a favorite of farmers who have mid-range acreage. Just like the other GLEANER combines, the R52 comes with a Natural Flow Harvesting System that has a unique transverse mounting cylinder which moves your crop in a ribbon-like fashion from the concave through the cage. So your crop never changes direction, giving you higher grain quality. The 64 inch cleaning shoe (the longest in the industry) contains an adjustable chaffer and sieve for even finer cleaning and separation. The R52 has a powerful liquid-cooled engine that can take on even the toughest farming conditions. The turbocharged, diesel power plant offers you the latest in technology, requires low maintenance, and holds 100 gallons of fuel, allowing you to work longer without having to stop to refuel. To get a closer look at the R52, just stop by and see us. You'll agree, the GLEANER R52 is engineered for better returns

Poultry Growers Increase Use Of Environmental Practices

GEORGETOWN, Del. — A recent survey by Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the trade association for the $1.5 billion a year poultry industry on the Delmarva Peninsula, shows another increase in the number of poultry houses served by dead-bird composters and manure storage structures.

Fifty-two percent of the chicken houses, or 3,249 have access to composters. This compares with 47 percent last year. In the first year of the annual survey in 1992, fewer than 10 percent of Delmarva's poultry houses were served by composters.

On every poultry farm there is normal mortality, and composting has become the preferred method of proper dead-bird disposal. The advantages are low cost, ease of operation, biosecurity, and its environmentally sound method of disposal.

"These survey results show that poultry growers are taking positive steps to protect the environment," said DPI President Dr. Spangler Klopp.

Composting is also the preferred method of handling large-scale losses due to heat, electric outages, disease, orother causes. A videotape on large-scale composting for distribution to all growers is being prepared by the University of Delaware, University of Maryland, Delaware Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, and DPI. A recent training session on large-scale composting was attended by nearly 200 people.

The DPI survey also revealed an increased number of manure storage structures. Fifty-three percent of Delmarva's poultry houses, or 3,323 houses, are served by manure storage structures, up from 48 percent last year. These facilities allow poultry growers to store manure for use later as a crop fertilizer. The proper storage of manure reduces the chances of environmental damage due to groundwater leaching of nutrients.

The increase in composters and manure storage structures is due in part to federal, state, and county conservation district cost-share programs.

Marketing Club Helps Members Learn

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The recent volatility of the grain market has increased grower interest in marketing strategies. Ten to twenty grain and livestock producers meet regularly, as the Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club, to discuss crop growing conditions and crop/livestock prices and to learn how to use futures and options markets to protect commodity prices.

One learning tool they use is a model farm for which they establish production levels and costs, plan and execute marketing strategies, and monitor profits and losses. They make limited cash transactions in the commodities markets, related to the model farm.

Occasionally, the club invites guest speakers such as university marketing specialists and commodity brokers.

Members have been especially enthusiastic about a video course, "Agricultural Marketing and Entrepreneurship" conducted by Dr. Jim Kendrick at the University of Nebraska. The course provided 45 hours of instruction through 16 weekly sessions from January 16 through April 30. Keystone Farm Credit, Fogelsville, shared the cost of the video course. The club intends to enroll in a future offering of the course, probably within the coming year.

Here are some of the things club members have been learning through the video course and other club-sponsered educational activities:

- Historic price patterns and how they affect marketing strategies
- How the future markets operate
- Ways to use marketing fundamentals and technical analysis to make sound buying and selling decisions
- Concepts of using basis determination to price crops and livestock
- How to protect prices with futures and options
- How transportation affects commodity production costs
- How to use marketing contracts with commodity buyers
- Ways the world economy and international trade affect local commodity prices

Current club officers are Kyle Henninger, Kutwtown, president; Don Newhard, Coplay, vice president; Larry Turner, Germansville, secretary; and Larry Moyer, Mertztown, treasurer.

Except during the video course, the club meets for breakfast, conversation, and business every three weeks at the Starlite Restaurant, Route 100 (just south of I-78), Fogelsville.

Call the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension Office at (610) 391-9840 to request notification of grain marketing events.

New Recognition For 'Jersey Tomato'

RUTGERS, N.J. — The New Jersey Tomato Council has been granted trademark recognition for "The Jersey Tomato." Consumers will now be able to request "The Jersey Tomato" by name, and be guaranteed that it is the original, high-quality, great-tasting "Jersey Tomato" that took the nation by storm in 1995.

The New Jersey Tomato Council is a cooperative of growers from throughout New Jersey who are committed to providing the best tasting tomato money can buy. All of "The Jersey Tomatoes" are packed at a central location, using state-of-the-art equipment to insure the gentlest handling of their delicious vine-ripened tomatoes.

After selling more than 250,000 boxes of "The Jersey Tomato" nationwide, the New Jersey Tomato Council is set to make the 1996 season another banner year for tomato lovers everywhere. Consumers can look forward to free samples of "The Jersey Tomato" in many of their favorite supermarkets. New recipes and serving suggestions will accompany "The Jersey Tomato's" accessible new displays.

Finding "The Jersey Tomato" will also be easier this season. Trademark status has opened new avenues to the New Jersey Tomato Council, from local farmers' markets to national distributors and, possibly, international clients as well.

"We owe our success to all the consumers who chose 'The Jersey Tomato' last season," said Bob Matarazzo, the New Jersey Tomato Council's marketing director. "This year, we will really focus on those consumers, and on getting 'The Jersey Tomato' to them in the quickest, freshest, most convenient ways possible."

Rural Development Conference Aug. 26-28

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rural development leaders from throughout the nation will gather in Lancaster in late August to discuss a wide range of strategies to promote economic and community development in rural areas at the Annual Leadership Conference of the National Rural Development Partnership.

The conference, which will attract federal and state government officials as well as representatives of the private sector and nonprofit organizations, will be held at the Lancaster Holiday Inn (former Host) on August 26-28.

"The goal of the conference is to bring together private organizations and government entities to create new approaches for strengthening rural communities," said Joe Dudick, executive director of the Pennsylvania Rural Development Council. "By collaborating, we can serve the needs of rural America more efficiently and effectively."

The theme of this year's conference will be "Rural America, 2000 and Beyond: Partnership in Action Now." Topics will include the building of council's capacity to use partnership strategies to meet rural challenges. Sessions on the broad range of issues affecting rural areas, from economic development and technology to land use planning and rural tourism. The emphasis is on interactive panels of experts — not "talking heads" and the private sector. The conference will also be used to build support for the NRDP's mission at national, state, and local levels.

The organizations was formed in 1990 to bring together government and private sector organizations to better address the needs of rural communities. Since its creation, it has implemented a statewide system to share product technology and marketing information, including international markets; facilitated work by ten public and private organizations to fund and accelerate building a retention dam and in the process, planners gained new information, revised their plans, and saved $240,000 in federal and state highways funds; and coordinated an effort to avoid closure of a rural county's only hospital by working with many agencies and individuals.

Participating in the conference will be senior federal and state government officials, experts in rural economic and community development, corporate executives, representatives of a broad range of nonprofit organizations, and rural-oriented "think tanks."

For more information on participating in the National Rural Development Partnership Annual Leadership Conference, contact the Pennsylvania Rural Development Council at (717) 787-1954.
